Lamentations

Lamentations - Introduction

Part 1: General Introduction

Outline of Lamentations

1. First poem: Lament over the desolation of Jerusalem (1:1–22)
2. Second poem: Yahweh has punished Zion (2:1–22)
3. Third poem: Suffering and hope in Yahweh's faithfulness (3:1–66)
4. Fourth poem: The destruction of Jerusalem's people and leaders (4:1–22)
5. Fifth poem: A communal prayer for restoration (5:1–22)

What is the book of Lamentations about?

The Babylonians destroyed Jerusalem in 586 B.C., burned the temple, and took most of the people into exile. Lamentations is a collection of five poems responding to this catastrophe. The poems express deep grief over the loss of the city and its people, confess that the destruction came as divine judgment for sin, and close with a prayer for Yahweh to restore his people. Central to the book is the declaration in chapter 3 that Yahweh's covenant faithfulness never ends.

Who wrote the book of Lamentations?

The book does not name its author. The traditional view, held by Jewish and early Christian interpreters, is that the prophet Jeremiah wrote it. The writer appears to have been an eyewitness to the fall of Jerusalem, and the tone of mourning resembles portions of the book of Jeremiah. However, the book itself does not make this claim. Translators may follow the traditional attribution or leave the authorship unspecified.

How should the title of this book be translated?

This book is traditionally called "Lamentations." Translators may use a descriptive title such as "Poems of Grief" or "Songs of Mourning." If translators follow the tradition that Jeremiah wrote it, a title like "The Laments of Jeremiah" is also possible.

Part 2: Important Religious and Cultural Concepts

Did God abandon his people?

The poems often describe Yahweh as having rejected or abandoned Jerusalem. This is part of the honest expression of suffering under divine judgment, not a final theological conclusion. The author also affirms that Yahweh's covenant faithfulness never ends and is renewed each morning (3:22–23). Unlike the gods of other ancient Near Eastern nations, who were thought to abandon their cities because they were too weak to protect them, Yahweh abandoned Jerusalem because his people sinned against him.

What is a lament?

A lament is a poem or song of grief and mourning. In the ancient Near East, people composed laments after the destruction of cities. The five poems in Lamentations are in this tradition, but they address Yahweh directly, confess sin, and express hope for restoration. Some scholars think the slow heavy rhythm of the Hebrew verse in this book reflects the weight of mourning.

Part 3: Important Translation Issues

The acrostic structure

Four of the five poems in Lamentations use an acrostic pattern based on the Hebrew alphabet of 22 letters. In chapters 1, 2, and 4 each verse begins with a successive letter of the Hebrew alphabet. In chapter 3, groups of three consecutive verses share each letter, creating 66 verses in total. Chapter 5 has 22 verses matching the alphabet count but does not follow alphabetic order. This structure cannot be reproduced in most languages. Translators do not need to create an equivalent; a brief explanatory note may help readers appreciate the literary craftsmanship of the original.

The personification of Jerusalem as a woman

Throughout Lamentations, the city of Jerusalem is addressed and described as a woman — a widow, a grieving mother, a disgraced princess. Neighboring nations are addressed the same way (for example, "the daughter of Edom" in 4:21). This literary technique helps readers feel the personal anguish of destruction. Translators should use feminine pronouns consistently when the text addresses the city in this way.

"let" and "may"

The ULT uses the English helping verbs "let" and "may" to show that a speaker is expressing a desire that something happen or that someone do something. It uses the verb "let" for more assertive expressions, and it uses the verb "may" for more deferential expressions. For example, when Jeremiah says in 3:28, "Let him sit alone and be silent," he means "I want him to sit alone and be silent." Languages that do not have a volitional form might say "He ought to sit alone and be silent," or they might use an imperative, "Sit alone and be silent!" Translate this volitional form in the most natural way in your language to indicate that the speaker is expressing what he wants someone to do or what he wishes someone would do.

Lamentations - Chapter 1 Introduction

Structure and Formatting

This chapter is a lament over the destruction of Jerusalem and the exile of Judah's people to Babylon. The narrator and personified Jerusalem alternate as speakers, mourning her desolation.

Religious and Cultural Concepts in This Chapter

Jerusalem personified as a woman

Throughout this chapter, Jerusalem is addressed as a woman — a widow, a princess, a grieving mother. Translators should use feminine pronouns consistently for the city.

Translation Issues in This Chapter

Acrostic structure

Each of the 22 verses begins with a successive letter of the Hebrew alphabet. Most languages cannot reproduce this pattern; a brief footnote may inform readers of this literary feature.

Lamentations 1:1 (#1)

אֵיכָכָה | יְשׁוּבָהּ בְּדָד הָעִיר רַבְּבֵתִי עָלָם

“How & alone, the city that was great with people”

The author is speaking of the city of Jerusalem as if it were a woman who could sit alone in mourning. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly. See the Introduction to Lamentations for further discussion of the term and how to translate it here and throughout this book. Alternate translation: [How the city that was great with people is now deserted]

See: Personification

Lamentations 1:1 (#2)

הִתְתָּה כְּאַלְמָנָה רַבְּבֵתִי בְּגוֹיִם

“She has become & who was great among the nations”

The point of this comparison is that just as a widow is alone, unprotected, and grieving, so is Jerusalem now without allies or support. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [She has become alone and unprotected, though she was once great among the nations]

See: Simile

Lamentations 1:1 (#3)

שָׁרְרֵתִי בְּמַדְיָנוֹת הִתְתָּה לְמָס

“has become a forced laborer”

Here the author is speaking as if Jerusalem were a princess who has been reduced to slavery. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [The city that once ruled over the provinces now serves them]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 1:2 (#1)

בְּכֹל תִּבְכֶּה בְּלַיְלָה וּדְמָעֶתָהּ עָלָה לְחֵיָהּ

“and her tears are on her cheeks”

The author is speaking of the city of Jerusalem as if it were a woman who weeps and has tears on her cheeks. See the note on verse one. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [The people of Jerusalem weep bitterly in the night, and their tears are on their cheeks]

See: Personification

Lamentations 1:2 (#2)

כָּל-רֵעֵיהֶּן בְּגָדוּ בָּהּ הָיוּ לָהּ לְאֹיְבִים

“her companions have betrayed her; they have become enemies to her”

These two phrases mean basically the same thing. The second emphasizes the meaning of the first by repeating the same idea with different words. Hebrew poetry was based on this kind of repetition, and you may want to show this to your readers by including both phrases in your translation. If it is helpful, you could connect the phrases in a way that shows that the second phrase is repeating the first one, not saying something additional. Alternate translation: [All her companions have betrayed her; yes, they have become her enemies]

See: Parallelism

Lamentations 1:3 (#1)

מֵעַלְנִי וּמִרֹב עֲבָדָהּ

“from affliction and from the greatness of forced labor”

If your language does not use abstract nouns for the ideas of affliction and greatness, you could express the same ideas in other ways. Alternate translation: [where she suffers greatly under forced labor]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 1:3 (#2)

לֹא מָצְאָהּ מְנוּחָה

“she has not found a resting place”

The author is speaking of having a secure and peaceful home as if it were a resting place that Judah could find. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [she finds no safe place to rest] or [she has found no peace and security]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 1:3 (#3)

בֵּינֵי הַמְצָרִים

“between the narrow passes”

Here the author is speaking as if being trapped with no escape were being caught between the narrow passes of a mountain gorge. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [in a place where they were trapped]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 1:4 (#1)

דְּרָכַי צִיּוֹן אֲבֵלּוּת

“of Zion are mourning”

The author is speaking of the roads of Zion as if they were a person who could mourn. He means that the roads are empty and unused. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [The roads of Zion are empty and unused]

See: Personification

Lamentations 1:5 (#1)

הִיוּ צָרֶיהָ לְרֹאשׁ אִיבֵיהָ שְׁלֹו

“Her adversaries have become the head; her enemies”

These two phrases mean basically the same thing. The second emphasizes the meaning of the first by repeating the same idea with different words. Hebrew poetry was based on this kind of repetition, and you may want to show this to your readers by including both phrases in your translation. If it is helpful, you could connect the phrases in a way that shows that the second phrase is repeating the first one, not saying something additional. Alternate translation: [Her adversaries have become the head and are prospering]

See: Parallelism

Lamentations 1:5 (#2)

עָל רַב־פְּשָׁעֶיהָ

“over the greatness”

If your language does not use abstract nouns for the ideas of greatness and transgressions, you could express the same ideas in other ways. Alternate translation: [because she transgressed so greatly against him]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 1:5 (#3)

עוֹלָלֶיהָ הִלְכּוּ שְׁבָרִי לְפָנֶי-צָר

“Her children have gone away & before the adversary”

The expression Her children have gone away as captives is a passive verbal form. If it would be unnatural to use that form, you could express the idea in active form or in another way that is natural in your language. If you need to say who does the action, the context indicates that it is the adversary. Alternate translation: [The adversary has taken her children away as captives]

See: Active or Passive

Lamentations 1:6 (#1)

מִן-בֶּת-צִיּוֹן

“from the daughter of Zion”

The author is speaking of Jerusalem and its people as if the city were a daughter. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [from Jerusalem] or [from the people of Zion]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 1:6 (#2)

כָּל־הַדָּרָגָה

“her majesty has departed”

Here the author is speaking as if Jerusalem's majesty were a person or thing that could depart from her. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [all her honor has been lost]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 1:6 (#3)

כָּל־הַדְּרָגָה

“her majesty has departed”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of majesty, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [everything that made her majestic is gone]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 1:6 (#4)

הֵיוּ שְׂרָרֶיהָ כְּאֵילִים לֹא־מְצָאוּ מְרֻעָה

“have become & that have found no pasture”

The point of this comparison is that just as deer that have found no pasture are weak and helpless, so are Her princes without strength or resources. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [Her princes have become weak and helpless, like deer that have found no pasture]

See: Simile

Lamentations 1:6 (#5)

בְּלֹא־כֹחַ

“without strength”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of strength, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [being completely weak]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 1:7 (#1)

יָמֵי עֲנִיָּהּ וּמְרוֹדָהּ

“in the days of her affliction and of her wanderings”

If your language does not use abstract nouns for the ideas of affliction and wanderings, you could express the same ideas in other ways. Alternate translation: [in the days when she was afflicted and displaced]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 1:7 (#2)

בְּנֶפֶל עֲמָמָה בְּיַד־צָרָר

“of the adversary”

The author is using fell into the hand of as a common expression of the culture to mean “came under the power of.” If this phrase does not have that meaning for your readers, you could use a comparable expression from your language that does have that meaning, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [When her people came under the power of the adversary]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 1:8 (#1)

לְנִידָה הָיְתָה

“she has become an abhorrence”

Here the author is speaking as if Jerusalem were an object of ritual abhorrence, something that people treat as defiling and avoid. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [she has become something people avoid]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 1:8 (#2)

עֲרוּתָהּ

“her nakedness”

By her nakedness, the author means her naked body is being exposed to shame before her enemies. You could indicate this explicitly in your translation if that would be helpful to your readers. Alternate translation: [how shamefully exposed she is]

See: Assumed Knowledge and Implicit Information

Lamentations 1:8 (#3)

וַתֵּשֶׁב אָחֹר

“backward”

Turning backward was a symbolic action by which Jerusalem showed her shame and disgrace before those who saw her. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could explain the significance of this action in the text of your translation or in a footnote. Alternate translation: [and retreated in shame]

See: Symbolic Action

Lamentations 1:9 (#1)

טמאתנה בשולליה

“Her uncleanness is in her skirts”

The author is referring to menstrual impurity in a polite way by using the phrase Her uncleanness is in her skirts. He uses this image to characterize Jerusalem’s profound defilement before God. Depending on what is helpful for your readers, you could use a polite way of referring to this in your language, or you could state this plainly. Alternate translation: [She is as unclean as a woman in her menstrual impurity] or [She is deeply defiled by her sin]

See: Euphemism

Lamentations 1:9 (#2)

טמאתנה

“Her uncleanness”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of uncleanness, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [The way she has made herself impure]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 1:9 (#3)

אחריתנה

“her end”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of her end, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [what would happen to her as a result]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 1:9 (#4)

ותתרד פלאאים

“And she went down astonishingly”

The author is speaking of Jerusalem’s ruin as if she were going down to a lower place. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [And she was brought to ruin in an astonishing way]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 1:9 (#5)

הגדיל אויב

“the enemy has magnified himself”

The word himself indicates that the object of the verb is the same as the subject of the verb. Use a way that is natural in your language to indicate that the enemy is the one doing the action to himself. Alternate translation: [the enemy has boasted greatly]

See: Reflexive Pronouns

Lamentations 1:10 (#1)

ידון פפרש צצר עמל כל-מחמדדיה

“The adversary & his hand over”

The author is using spread out his hand over as a common expression of the culture to mean “seized and took possession of.” If this phrase does not have that meaning for your readers, you could use a comparable expression from your language that does have that meaning, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [The adversary has seized all her precious things]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 1:11 (#1)

מבקששים ללהם

“seeking bread”

The author is using one kind of food, bread, to mean food in general. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [seeking food]

See: Synecdoche

Lamentations 1:11 (#2)

להשגיב נגפש

“to restore life”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of life, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [to keep themselves alive]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 1:11 (#3)

ראאה יהוה והבטישה כפי הטיתי זוללה

“See, Yahweh, and look, for I have become despised”

It would be good to present this as a direct quotation, if possible, to show that the city of Jerusalem is speaking to Yahweh.

See: Direct and Indirect Quotations

Lamentations 1:12 (#1)

לֹא אֵלֶיכֶם כָּל־עֹבְרֵי דֶרֶךְ

“Is it nothing to you, all you who pass along the way”

Jerusalem is speaking to all you who pass along the way, people who are not in conversation with her. She is doing this to communicate to the people listening to her that she feels very strongly about her suffering. If it would be helpful in your language, you could translate these words as if she were speaking directly to the people about the passers-by. It would be good to present verse 12 through verse 16 as a direct quotation, if possible, to show that Jerusalem is speaking to the people. Alternate translation: [Is it nothing to all those who pass along the way]

See: Apostrophe

Lamentations 1:12 (#2)

לֹא אֵלֶיכֶם כָּל־עֹבְרֵי דֶרֶךְ

“Is it nothing to you, all you who pass along the way”

Jerusalem is using the question form to emphasize that the passers-by should pay attention to its suffering and that no one has ever suffered as it has. If a speaker of your language would not use the question form for that purpose, you could translate this question as a statement or as an exclamation. Alternate translation: [You who pass along the way should care deeply about what has happened to me.]

See: Rhetorical Question

Lamentations 1:12 (#3)

בְּיָוֶם חֲרָוֹן אַפּוֹ

“on the day of his burning anger”

The speaker is using the day of his burning anger as a common expression of the culture to mean the time when Yahweh expressed his fierce anger in judgment. If this phrase does not have that meaning for your readers, you could use a comparable expression from your language that does have that meaning, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [at the time when he was fiercely angry]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 1:13 (#1)

מִמָּרְרוֹם שְׁלַח־אֲשֶׁר בַּעֲצָמָתַי וַיִּרְדְּדֵנִי

“fire”

Jerusalem is speaking as if God's judgment were fire that he sent from heaven into her bones and that ruled over them. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [From on high he sent suffering deep inside me, and it overwhelmed me]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 1:13 (#2)

פָּרַשׁ רַגְשׁוֹ לְרַגְלֵי הַשִּׁיבְנֵי אַחֲוִיר

“for my feet & back”

Here Jerusalem is speaking as if God were a hunter who spread a net to catch prey and turned her back so she could not escape. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [He trapped me and kept me from going forward]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 1:14 (#1)

נִשְׁקָדוּ עָלַי פְּשָׁעַי בְּיָדוֹ יִשְׁתַּרְגְּמוּ עָלַי עַל־צִוְאוֹרָי

“The yoke of my transgressions was bound fast, they are intertwined by his hand; they have come up onto my neck”

Here Jerusalem is speaking as if her sins were a yoke that was bound fast and intertwined and placed on her neck, like the wooden frame placed on the neck of a draft animal to control it. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [My sins have completely overpowered me] or [Yahweh has made my sins control me completely]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 1:14 (#2)

נִשְׁקָדוּ עָלַי פְּשָׁעַי

“The yoke of my transgressions was bound fast”

The expression The yoke of my transgressions was bound fast is a passive verbal form. If it would be unnatural to use that form, you could express the idea in active form or in another way that is natural in your language. If you need to say who does the action, the context indicates that it is God. Alternate translation: [He bound fast the yoke of my transgressions]

See: Active or Passive

Lamentations 1:14 (#3)

פִּשְׁעַי

“of my transgressions”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of transgressions, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [of the ways I transgressed]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 1:14 (#4)

כְּחֵי

“my strength to stumble”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of strength, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [me to become weak]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 1:15 (#1)

גָּגַת דְּרָרֶךְ אֲדֹנָי לְבַת־יְהוּדָה

“The Lord & for the virgin & of Judah”

Here Jerusalem is speaking as if the Lord were a person who has trodden the winepress, crushing grapes underfoot. She means that the Lord has crushed the people of Judah in judgment. If this image communicates well in your language, please use it. If not, you could express this as a comparison. Alternate translation: [The Lord has crushed the virgin daughter of Judah like grapes in a winepress]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 1:15 (#2)

לְבַת־יְהוּדָה

“for the virgin & of Judah”

Jerusalem is speaking of the people of Judah as if they were a virgin daughter. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [for the people of Judah]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 1:16 (#1)

אֲנִי בֹכֵיָה עֵינַי אֶעֱיֵי יְהוּדָה מַמִּים

“I, I am weeping; my eye, my eye is running down with water”

The repetition of the phrases, I, I am weeping and my eye, my eye is an emphatic form. Jerusalem is using the repetition for emphasis to express the intensity of her weeping. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express the emphasis with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [I am weeping; my eye is continually running down with water]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 1:16 (#2)

עֵינַי יְהוּדָה מַמִּים

“my eye, my eye is running down with water”

Here Jerusalem is speaking as if her eye were a stream of water running down. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [my tears are flowing constantly]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 1:16 (#3)

מְנַחֵם

“a comforter”

Jerusalem is not referring to a specific comforter. She means anyone in general who could comfort. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could use an expression that would be more natural in your language. Alternate translation: [anyone to comfort me]

See: Generic Noun Phrases

Lamentations 1:16 (#4)

מִשְׁשִׁיב נַפְשִׁי

“who restores my life”

Jerusalem is speaking of her life as if it were something that could be restored and given back to her. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [who could revive my strength]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 1:17 (#1)

פָּרְשָׁה צִיּוֹן בְּיָדֶיהָ

“Zion has spread out her hands”

The author is speaking of Zion as if it were a woman who could spread out her hands in a gesture of pleading. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [The people of Zion plead for help]

See: Personification

Lamentations 1:17 (#2)

הִתְתָּה יְרוּשָׁלַם לְנִדְוָה בֵּינֵיהֶם

“Jerusalem has become an abhorrence among them”

Here the author is speaking as if Jerusalem were an object of ritual abhorrence, something that the surrounding nations treat as defiling and avoid. See the note on verse 8. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [Jerusalem has become something all the surrounding nations consider filthy]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 1:18 (#1)

צָדִיק הוּא יְהוָה כִּי פָפִיתִי מִרְגִּיתִי

“Yahweh [is] righteous, for I have rebelled against his mouth”

It would be good to present verse 18 through verse 22 as a direct quotation, if possible, to show that the city of Jerusalem is speaking. In [verses 18–19], Jerusalem speaks to passers-by, and in [20–22] she speaks directly to Yahweh.

See: Personification

Lamentations 1:18 (#2)

כִּי פָפִיתִי מִרְגִּיתִי

“for I have rebelled against his mouth”

Here, his mouth represents his commands. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [for I have rebelled against his commands]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 1:18 (#3)

כָּל-עַמִּים

“all peoples”

Jerusalem is speaking to all peoples. She is doing this to communicate to the people listening that she feels very strongly about her suffering. If it would be helpful in your language, you could translate these words as if she were speaking directly to the people as in the UST.

See: Apostrophe

Lamentations 1:19 (#1)

הִתְמָה רַמְמוֹנִי

“deceived me”

The repetition of the pronoun they, they is an emphatic form. Jerusalem is using the repetition for emphasis to express the depth of betrayal. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express the emphasis with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [they completely deceived me]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 1:19 (#2)

גָּנוּעִי

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: גָּנוּעִי”

Jerusalem is referring to death in a polite way by using the word expired. Depending on what is helpful for your readers, you could use a polite way of referring to this in your language, or you could state this plainly. Alternate translation: [passed away] or [died]

See: Euphemism

Lamentations 1:20 (#1)

רֹאאֵה יְהוָה כִּי-צָר־לִי

“See, Yahweh, for I am in distress”

This is an imperative, but it communicates a polite request rather than a command. Jerusalem is urgently appealing to Yahweh to observe her suffering. If the imperative does not communicate a polite request for your readers, then use a form in your language that communicates a polite request. Alternate translation: [Please see, Yahweh, that I am in distress]

See: Imperatives — Other Uses

Lamentations 1:20 (#2)

מַעֲעִי חֲמִרְמִירוֹ

“my inward parts are churning”

Here, my inward parts represent deep emotions. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [I am deeply distressed]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 1:20 (#3)

נִהַפְפֹּד לִבִּי בְקִרְבִּי

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: לְבִי בְקָרְבִי”

Here Jerusalem is speaking as if her heart had been physically overturned within her. She means that she is in complete emotional anguish. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [I am in total anguish within myself]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 1:20 (#4)

לְבִי בְקָרְבִי

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: לְבִי בְקָרְבִי”

The expression my heart has been overturned is a passive verbal form. If it would be unnatural to use that form, you could express the idea in active form or in another way that is natural in your language. If you need to say who does the action, the context indicates that it is God. Alternate translation: [God has overturned my heart within me]

See: Active or Passive

Lamentations 1:20 (#5)

מִחוּץ שְׂכָל־הַחָרֹב בְּכָל־מָוֶת

“Outside the sword”

Jerusalem is referring to all of the destruction by naming two extremes, Outside and inside. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [Everywhere there is death, both outside in the streets and inside the buildings]

See: Merism

Lamentations 1:21 (#1)

אֵין מְנַחֵם לִי

“there is no comforter for me”

Jerusalem is not referring to a specific comforter. She means, in a general sense, someone who is willing or able to comfort her. See how you translated the same word in verse 16. Alternate translation: [there is no one able to comfort me] or [there is no one willing to comfort me]

See: Generic Noun Phrases

Lamentations 1:21 (#2)

רָעִיתִי

“my calamity”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of calamity, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [the tragic events that we have experienced]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 1:21 (#3)

וְיִהְיֶה כִּמּוֹנִי

“and let them be like me”

When Jerusalem says and let them be like me, she is saying what she wants God to do. Alternate translation: [and I desire that our enemies will suffer as we have] or [and God, you should require our enemies to experience the same]

See: Third-Person Imperatives

Lamentations 1:22 (#1)

פְּשָׁעֵי

“my transgressions”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of transgressions, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [the wrong actions I have done]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations - Chapter 2 Introduction

Structure and Formatting

Lamentations 2 is a 22-verse acrostic poem; each verse begins with a successive letter of the Hebrew alphabet. The poet portrays Yahweh himself as a warrior and enemy who has brought destruction on Jerusalem and her people.

Religious and Cultural Concepts in This Lament

The daughter of Zion

The phrase “daughter of Zion” is an idiom, a common expression in the original language for referring to a city and its inhabitants. Translators should render this in a way that is clear and natural in their language.

The footstool of God

The temple in Jerusalem was spoken of as the footstool of God, the place where his presence rested on earth. This image makes the destruction of the temple especially shocking.

Translation Issues in This Chapter

Acrostic structure

Each verse begins with a successive Hebrew letter (aleph through taw). Most languages cannot reproduce this pattern; a brief note explaining the acrostic to readers is sufficient.

Lamentations 2:1 (#1)

אִיכָהָהּ יָעֵלֵב בְּאַפּוֹ | אֶדְנִי אֶת־בֶּת־צִיּוֹן

“How the Lord has covered with a cloud the daughter of Zion in his nose”

The exclamation How indicates that Jeremiah is expressing his grief and sorrow over what the Lord has done to Jerusalem. Your language may have its own way of expressing feelings of grief and sorrow. Alternate translation: [The Lord has covered with a cloud in his anger the daughter of Zion]

See: Exclamations

Lamentations 2:1 (#2)

יָעֵלֵב

“has covered with a cloud”

The writer is speaking of the Lord bringing judgment on Jerusalem as if the Lord covered with a cloud the city, that is, as if he brought darkness and gloom upon it. If your language has a comparable expression, you could use it. If not, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [has darkened]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 2:1 (#3)

בְּאַפּוֹ

“in his nose”

The writer is using the phrase in his nose as a common expression of the culture to mean that the Lord is angry. If this phrase does not have that meaning for your readers, use a comparable expression from your language that does have that meaning or state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [in his wrath]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 2:1 (#4)

אֶת־בֶּת־צִיּוֹן

“the daughter of Zion”

The writer is speaking of the people of Jerusalem as if they were a daughter of the city. This is a common expression in the original language for referring to a city and its inhabitants. If your language has a comparable expression, you could use it. If not, you could state the meaning plainly here and elsewhere in this lament. See the Lamentations 2 Introduction for more information. Alternate translation: [the people of Jerusalem]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 2:1 (#5)

הַשְׁלִידָהּ מִשְׁמַיִם אֶרֶץ תִּפְאֶרֶת יִשְׂרָאֵל

“He has cast from heaven to earth the splendor of Israel”

The writer is speaking of the Lord removing Israel’s honor as if the Lord had cast down from heaven to earth the splendor of Israel. The image of heaven represents a high and honored position, while earth represents a low and disgraced position. If your language has a comparable expression, you could use it. If not, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [He has taken away the honor of Israel and made it a disgrace]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 2:1 (#6)

תִּפְאֶרֶת יִשְׂרָאֵל

“the splendor of Israel”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of splendor, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [everything that made Israel splendid]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 2:1 (#7)

הַדָּם־רַגְלָיו

“the footstool of his feet”

Here, the footstool of his feet represents the temple in Jerusalem, since the temple was considered the place where God’s presence rested on earth, as a king rests his feet on a footstool. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [his temple]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 2:1 (#8)

הַדָּם־רַגְלָיו

“the footstool of his feet”

The writer is using the possessive form to describe a footstool that belongs to God, that is, the place where God rests his feet. This refers to the temple or the ark of the covenant. If a speaker of your language would not use the possessive form for this, you could express the idea in another way. Alternate translation: [the footstool where he rests his feet]

See: Possession

Lamentations 2:1 (#9)

בַּיּוֹם אָפוּ

“on the day of his nose”

Here, on the day of his nose represents the time or occasion when God acted in judgment. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [on the occasion of his wrath]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 2:2 (#1)

בִּלְעֵ אֲדֹנָי

“The Lord has swallowed up”

The writer is speaking of the Lord completely destroying the settlements of Jacob as if the Lord has swallowed them up, as a person might consume food. If your language has a comparable expression, you could use it. If not, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [The Lord has completely destroyed]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 2:2 (#2)

אֵאת כָּל־נְאֻמוֹת יִצְחָקִיב

“all the pastures of Jacob”

Here, all the pastures of Jacob represents the dwelling places of the people of Israel, since pastures were the places where people lived and kept their flocks. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [all the dwelling places of the descendants of Jacob]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 2:2 (#3)

בְּעִבְרַתָּו

“in his wrath”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of wrath, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [very angrily]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 2:2 (#4)

הִגְיַע לְאַרְצִי

“he has brought {them} to the ground”

The writer is speaking of the Lord destroying the fortifications as if he has brought them to the ground, that is, knocked them flat. If your language has a comparable expression, you could use it. If not, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [he has completely destroyed them]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 2:2 (#5)

חָלַל מִמְּלֶכְכָּה וְשָׂרֶיהָ

“He has profaned the kingdom and her princes”

The writer is speaking of the Lord stripping the kingdom and its rulers of their honor and dignity as if they were sacred things that the Lord had made common and unclean. If your language has a comparable expression, you could use it. If not, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [He has dishonored the kingdom and its princes]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 2:3 (#1)

גִּדְּעַ בְּחֵרֵי אֲפִי כָּל־קַרְנוֹ יִשְׂרָאֵל

“He has cut off in the burning of nose every horn of Israel”

The writer is speaking of God removing the power of Israel as if God cut off every horn, since a horn represents the strength and power of an animal. If your language has a comparable expression, you could use it. If not, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [He has destroyed in fierce anger all the power of Israel]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 2:3 (#2)

בְּחֵרֵי אֲפִי

“in the burning of nose”

Here, nose represents the emotion of wrath, since the nostrils flare when a person is angry. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use a compaable expression that has the same meaning or state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [in burning wrath] or [angrily]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 2:3 (#3)

הַשָּׂרִיב אֶחָדָהּ וְיָמִינוֹ

“He has turned back his right hand”

Here, his right hand represents God’s power to help and protect his people, since the right hand was associated with strength and action. The writer says that God turned back this power, meaning he withdrew his protection. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use a comparable expression or state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [He has withdrawn his protective power]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 2:3 (#4)

מִפְּנֵי אֹיִיבֵי

“from the face of the enemy”

Jeremiah is using from the face of as a common expression to mean “from before” or “away from the direction of.” He means that God withdrew his right hand away from facing the enemy, leaving Israel unprotected. If this phrase does not have that meaning for your readers, you could use a comparable expression from your language or state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [from before the enemy] or [from the enemy’s advance]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 2:3 (#5)

וַיִּבְעֶר בְּיַעֲקֹב כְּאֵשׁ לֶהֲבִיָּהּ

“and he burned in Jacob like a fire of flame”

The writer uses this comparison to say that God’s judgment was as destructive to Israel as a fire of flame is to whatever it burns. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [and he has destroyed Jacob with devastating force]

See: Simile

Lamentations 2:3 (#6)

אֶכְלָלָה סָבִיב

“consuming all around”

The writer is continuing the image of fire, speaking of God’s judgment as a flame that destroys everything in its path. The word consuming pictures the fire burning to nothing everything it touches. If your language has a comparable expression, you could use it. If not, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [destroying everything on every side]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 2:4 (#1)

דָּרְרָה קִשְׁתּוֹ כְּאֹיִיבֵי וְיָמִינוֹ כְּצִפּוֹר

“He has bent his bow like an enemy; his right hand is stationed like an adversary”

The writer uses comparisons to describe God’s hostility toward his own people. He says that God has bent his bow like an enemy; his right hand is stationed like an adversary, meaning that God has prepared to attack his people the way an enemy would and has taken the stance of one ready to fight against them. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [He has prepared to attack us as an enemy would; he has positioned himself to fight against us like an adversary]

See: Simile

Lamentations 2:4 (#2)

וְיָמִינוֹ

“his right hand”

Here, his right hand represents God’s power and ability to act. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [his power]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 2:4 (#3)

כָּל מִתְדֵי־עֵינַיִן

“all the delights of the eye”

Here, the eye represents sight and what is pleasing to behold. The phrase the delights of the eye refers to everything people treasured and found beautiful. Some understand this as referring specifically to the fine young men of Judah. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [everything they treasured] or [all the finest young men]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 2:4 (#4)

בְּאֶהְלֵל בֵּת-צִיּוֹן

“In the tent of the daughter of Zion”

The writer speaks of Zion as if it were a woman, calling it the daughter of Zion, and he describes the city as her tent or dwelling place. For more information, see the Lamentations 2 Introduction. If it would be helpful in your language, you could express this idea in another way here and in verse 18. Alternate translation: [In the city of Jerusalem]

See: Personification

Lamentations 2:4 (#5)

שָׁפַךְ כַּאֲשֶׁר חֵמָתוֹ

“he has poured out his anger like fire”

The writer uses a comparison to describe God’s anger. He says that God has poured out his anger like fire, meaning that God’s anger has been destructive and consuming. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [his anger has been as destructive as fire]

See: Simile

Lamentations 2:4 (#6)

שָׁפַךְ כַּאֲשֶׁר חֵמָתוֹ

“he has poured out his anger like fire”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of anger, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [he has shown how angry he is by burning like fire]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 2:5 (#1)

הָיָה אֶדְנִי כְּאוֹיֵב

“The Lord has become like an enemy”

The writer uses a comparison to describe how God has treated his own people. He says that The Lord has become like an enemy, meaning that God has acted against his people as an enemy would. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [The Lord has acted as though he were an enemy]

See: Simile

Lamentations 2:5 (#2)

בְּלִעַי יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּלַעַל כָּל-אֲרָמְנוֹתָיִה שְׁחָתָה מִבְּצָרָיִי

“he has swallowed up Israel. He has swallowed up all her citadels; he has destroyed his fortifications”

These three phrases mean basically the same thing. Each one emphasizes the totality of God’s destruction by repeating the same idea with different words. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could combine them and express the emphasis in another way. Another approach would be to connect the phrases with words that show that the second and third phrases are repeating the first one, not saying something additional. See how you as a team have decided to translate the parallel phrases in Lamentations, and follow that approach here and throughout this chapter. Alternate translation: [He has utterly destroyed Israel, all her citadels, and all his fortifications]

See: Parallelism

Lamentations 2:5 (#3)

בְּלִעַי יִשְׂרָאֵל

“he has swallowed up Israel”

The writer is speaking of God’s destruction of Israel as if God had swallowed the nation like a beast consuming its prey. This emphasizes the completeness of the destruction. Your language may have a comparable expression you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [he has completely destroyed Israel]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 2:5 (#4)

תִּאֲנִיָּה וְאֲנִיָּה

“mourning and groaning”

The terms mourning and groaning mean similar things. The writer is using the two terms together for emphasis. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express the emphasis with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [great grief]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 2:5 (#5)

תִּאֲנִיָּה וְאֲנִיָּה

“mourning and groaning”

If your language does not use abstract nouns for the ideas of mourning and groaning, you could express the same ideas in another way. Alternate translation: [and caused people to mourn and lament greatly]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 2:6 (#1)

וַיַּחַמְדֵּם כְּגֵן שְׂכֹרִי

“And he has done violence like {to} his garden booth”

The writer is comparing God’s destruction of his sanctuary to the tearing down of his garden booth, a temporary seasonal shelter. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [He violently tore down his sanctuary as if it were a temporary shelter]

See: Simile

Lamentations 2:6 (#2)

מוֹעֵד וְשַׁבָּת

“appointed festival and Sabbath”

The writer is referring to all of Israel’s sacred worship occasions by naming two major components, appointed festival and Sabbath. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [all their sacred worship occasions]

See: Merism

Lamentations 2:6 (#3)

בְּזַעַם-אַפָּיו

“in the indignation of his nose”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of indignation, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [because he was indignantly angry]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 2:6 (#4)

מֶלֶךְ וְכֹהֵן

“king and priest”

The writer is referring to all of Israel’s leadership by naming two major components, king and priest. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [all their leaders]

See: Merism

Lamentations 2:7 (#1)

מִזְבְּחוֹ

“his altar”

Here, his altar represents the entire sacrificial worship system of Israel. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [the Israelites’ worship] or [the place where people offered sacrifices to him]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 2:7 (#2)

הַסִּגִּירָה בְּיַד-אוֹיְבֵי חוֹמֹת אֶרְמְנוֹתֶיהָ

“He has delivered up into the hand of the enemy the walls of her palaces”

Here, the hand of the enemy represents the power and control of the enemy. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [He has given the walls of her palaces over to the enemy’s control]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 2:7 (#3)

קָוָה בְּתִנְנוּ בְּבֵית-יְהוָה כִּי־יִזְעַד מוֹעֵד

“They raised a shout in the house of Yahweh as on the day of an appointed festival”

The writer compares the shouts of the enemies in the house of Yahweh to the shouts of worshipers on an appointed festival day. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [They shouted in the house of Yahweh the way worshipers used to shout on a festival day]

See: Simile

Lamentations 2:8 (#1)

בְּנִסְתָּה קֶלֶר

“He stretched out the measuring line”

The writer is speaking of God’s careful planning for destruction as if God had stretched out the measuring line like a builder measuring before construction. However, God measured not to build but to tear down. If your language does not use this image, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [He carefully planned the destruction]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 2:8 (#2)

לֹא-הִשְׁשִׁיב יָדוֹ מִבִּלְלַע

“he did not turn back his hand from swallowing up”

The writer is speaking of God's destructive action as if God were swallowing up the city, consuming it completely. The phrase his hand represents God's active power. If your language does not use this image, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [he did not hold back from completely destroying it]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 2:8 (#3)

וַיֹּאבֶל־חֹמַת וְחוֹמָמָה יַחְדָּדוּ אִמְלִלוּ

“And he caused the rampart and wall to mourn; together they have languished”

The writer speaks of the rampart and wall as if they were people who could mourn and languish. He says this because they lie in ruins. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [And he caused the rampart and wall to fall into ruins]

See: Personification

Lamentations 2:8 (#4)

חֹמַת וְחוֹמָמָה

“the rampart and wall”

The writer is referring to all of Jerusalem's defensive structures by naming two major components, the rampart and the wall. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [all of Jerusalem's defenses]

See: Merism

Lamentations 2:9 (#1)

טָבַעְעוּ בְּאַרְצִיץ שְׁעָרֶיהָ

“Her gates have sunk into the ground”

The writer is speaking of the complete destruction of Her gates as if they had sunk into the ground. If your language does not use this image, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [Her gates have been completely destroyed]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 2:9 (#2)

אֶבֶד וְשִׁבְרַת בְּרִיחֶיהָ

“he has destroyed and shattered her bars”

The terms destroyed and shattered mean similar things. The writer is using the two terms together for emphasis. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express the emphasis with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [he has completely destroyed the bars of her gates]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 2:9 (#3)

אֵין תּוֹרָה

“there is no law”

Here, law represents the entire instruction and guidance of God. Without their land and temple, the people have no access to God's teaching. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [No one teaches them God's law]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 2:9 (#4)

גַּם-נְבִיאֶיהָ לֹא-מָצְאוּ חִזְיוֹן מִיהוָה

“Also, her prophets do not find a vision from Yahweh”

The writer is speaking of receiving a vision from Yahweh as if it were something that could be found through searching. He means that Yahweh has ceased communicating with the prophets. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [Also, her prophets have received no vision from Yahweh]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 2:10 (#1)

יִשְׁבּוּ לְאַרְצִיץ יָדְמוּ וְזָקְנֵי בִתְ-צִיּוֹן הִעָלְלוּ עֶפְרַר עַל-רֹאשֵׁיהֶם חִגְרוּ שִׁקְקִים הוֹרִידוּ לְאַרְצִיץ רֹאשֵׁיהֶם בְּתוֹלֶלֶת יְרוּשָׁלַם

“They sit on the ground; the elders of the daughter of Zion are silent. They have thrown up dust on their heads; they have put on sackcloth. The virgins of Jerusalem have bowed their heads to the ground”

Sitting on the ground in silence, throwing up dust on their heads, and putting on sackcloth (rough goat-hair cloth) were mourning customs expressing grief too deep for words. Bowing the head to the ground was a symbolic action expressing utter humiliation and grief. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could explain the significance of these actions in the text of your translation or in a footnote. Alternate translation: [The elders of the daughter of Zion sit on the ground in silence to show that they are overwhelmed with grief. They have thrown up dust on their heads; they have put on sackcloth. The virgins of Jerusalem bowed their heads to the ground to show their utter humiliation and grief]

See: Symbolic Action

Lamentations 2:10 (#2)

יְדֻמוּ זְקֵנֵי בֵּת-צִיּוֹן הַעֲלִיזוּ עֶפְרַיִם עַל-רֹאשֵׁם הִגְרָרוּ שְׂקָקִים הַוִּירְגִּין לְאֶרְצָן רֹאשָׁן בְּתוֹלֵלֶת יְרוּשָׁלַם

“the elders of the daughter of Zion are silent. They have thrown up dust on their heads; they have put on sackcloth. The virgins of Jerusalem have bowed their heads to the ground”

The writer is referring to all of the people of Jerusalem by naming two extremes, the elders (the oldest) and The virgins (the youngest women). If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [Everyone in Jerusalem, both old and young, has silently thrown dust on their heads and put on sackcloth and bowed their heads to the ground]

See: Merism

Lamentations 2:11 (#1)

כָּלִּלּוֹ בְּדִמְעוֹת עֵינַי

“My eyes have failed with tears”

The writer is using the expression My eyes have failed with tears as a common expression of the culture to mean that one has wept so much that the eyes are exhausted and can no longer produce tears. If this phrase does not have that meaning for your readers, you could use a comparable expression from your language that does have that meaning, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [I have cried until my eyes are exhausted]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 2:11 (#2)

הַמְרַמְרֵם מִצֵּעִי

“my inner parts churn”

Here, my inner parts represent deep emotional anguish. Jeremiah uses the internal organs as a way of referring to intense grief. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [I am deeply troubled within]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 2:11 (#3)

נִשְׁפָּךְ לְאֶרְצָן כְּבִדִּי

“My liver is poured out to the ground”

The writer is speaking of his emotional anguish as if his liver had been poured out to the ground, like liquid spilling from a container. He means that he is completely overwhelmed. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [I am completely overwhelmed with grief]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 2:11 (#4)

עוֹלִלִל וְיֹנֵנֶק

“child and infant”

The terms child and infant are paired to represent the very youngest and most vulnerable members of the community. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express this with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [the young children]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 2:12 (#1)

בְּהִתְעַטְּפָם כְּחָלָל בְּרַחֲבֹת עֵיר

“when they faint like the slain in the streets of the city”

The writer compares the children to the slain collapsing in the streets, meaning the children fall as though they have been mortally wounded, but from hunger rather than the sword. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [when they collapse and die in the city streets]

See: Simile

Lamentations 2:12 (#2)

בְּהִשְׁתַּפֵּךְ נַפְשָׁם אֶל-חֶיק אִמָּתָם

“when their life is poured out in the lap of their mothers”

The writer is speaking of the children's lives slowly draining away as if their souls were poured out like liquid from a container. He means that the children die slowly in their mothers' arms. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly.

Alternate translation: [as they slowly die while their mothers hold them]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 2:13 (#1)

מה-אֶעֱדֶיךָ מִמָּה אֲדַמָּה-לְלֶךְ הַבַּת יְרוּשָׁלַם מִמָּה אֲשֶׁנָּה-לְדָךְ וְאֵנָּה מִמָּה בְּתוּלֵלֶת בֶּת-צִיּוֹן

“What can I testify to you? To what can I compare you, O daughter of Jerusalem? To what can I liken you, that I may comfort you, O virgin daughter of Zion”

The writer uses a series of rhetorical questions to express the idea that he cannot find anything adequate to say about Jerusalem’s suffering, to express the idea that nothing compares to her suffering, and that no comparison is adequate to bring comfort. If you would not use rhetorical questions for this purpose in your language, you could translate this as a statement. Alternate translation: [I do not know what I could say to you. Nothing can be compared to your suffering, O daughter of Jerusalem. There is nothing I can say to bring you comfort, O virgin daughter of Zion.]

See: Rhetorical Question

Lamentations 2:13 (#2)

כִּי-גֵדְדוֹל כַּיָּם שִׁבְרֶךָ

“For your brokenness is as great as the sea”

The writer uses a comparison to describe Jerusalem’s destruction. He compares it to the greatness of the sea, meaning that the brokenness is immeasurable and overwhelming in its vastness. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [Your destruction is as vast and deep as the ocean]

See: Simile

Lamentations 2:13 (#3)

שִׁבְרֶךָ

“your brokenness”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of brokenness, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [how broken you are]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 2:13 (#4)

מִמִּי יִרְפָּא-לְךָ

“who can heal you”

The writer uses another rhetorical question to express the idea that no one can remedy Jerusalem’s suffering. If you would not use a rhetorical question for this purpose in your language, you could translate this as a statement. Alternate translation: [no one can heal you.]

See: Rhetorical Question

Lamentations 2:14 (#1)

שָׁשׂוּא וְתַפְסִיל

“falsehood and worthlessness”

The terms falsehood and worthlessness mean similar things. The writer is using the two terms together to emphasize that what the prophets claimed to see had no truth or value. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express the emphasis with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [things that were completely misleading]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 2:14 (#2)

עֲוֹנוֹךְ

“your iniquity”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of iniquity, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [the ways you sinned]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 2:14 (#3)

מִשְׁאָאוֹת שָׁשׂוּא וּמִדֻּחִים

“oracles of falsehood and enticement”

The terms falsehood and enticement are paired to characterize the prophets’ deceptive messages as both untrue and misleadingly appealing. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express this with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [utterly false visions]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 2:15 (#1)

סָקְקוּ עֲלֵיךְ כַּפֵּיָם

“clap {their} hands at you”

Clapping hands at someone was a symbolic action by which they showed scorn, mockery, and contempt. This is not applause. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could explain the significance of this action in the text of your translation or in a footnote. Alternate translation: [mock you by clapping their hands]

See: Symbolic Action

Lamentations 2:15 (#2)

שָׂרְקוּ וַיִּנְבְּצוּ רֹאשֵׁיהֶם

“They hiss and shake their heads”

Hissing and shaking the head were symbolic gestures of derision and scorn. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could add a short explanation. Alternate translation: [They express their contempt by hissing and shaking their heads]

See: Symbolic Action

Lamentations 2:15 (#3)

הַזֹּנְתֹת הָעֵיִר שִׁיאֲמָרוּן כָּל־לֵיל יִפִּי מִשְׁשׂוֹשׁ לְכָל־הָאָרֶץ

“Is this the city that they called ‘the perfection of beauty, the joy of all the earth’

The passers-by use a rhetorical question to express their disbelief that the once-glorious city has fallen to such ruin. If you would not use a rhetorical question for this purpose in your language, you could translate this as a statement or an exclamation. Alternate translation: [This cannot be the city that people used to call the most beautiful, the joy of the entire earth!]

See: Rhetorical Question

Lamentations 2:15 (#4)

הַזֹּנְתֹת הָעֵיִר שִׁיאֲמָרוּן כָּל־לֵיל יִפִּי מִשְׁשׂוֹשׁ לְכָל־הָאָרֶץ

“Is this the city that they called ‘the perfection of beauty, the joy of all the earth’

This is a quotation within a quotation. The passers-by are quoting a title that others previously gave to Jerusalem. If your language does not allow quotations within quotations, you could express the inner quotation as indirect speech as in the UST.

See: Quotes within Quotes

Lamentations 2:15 (#5)

כָּל־לֵיל יִפִּי מִשְׁשׂוֹשׁ לְכָל־הָאָרֶץ

“the perfection of beauty, the joy of all the earth”

The expressions the perfection of beauty and the joy of all the earth are paired to express the former glory of Jerusalem. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express this with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [the pride and joy of all the earth]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 2:16 (#1)

פָּצְצוּ עַל־יָד פִּיהֶם

“have opened their mouths against you”

Opening the mouth wide against someone was a symbolic action by which someone showed hostility, scorn, and readiness to devour. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could explain the significance of this action in the text of your translation or in a footnote. Alternate translation: [mocked you openly]

See: Symbolic Action

Lamentations 2:16 (#2)

שָׂרְקוּ וַיִּחַרְקוּ־שִׁשְׁן

“They hiss and gnash {their} teeth”

Hissing and gnashing the teeth were symbolic gestures expressing hatred, rage, and contempt. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could add a short explanation.

See: Symbolic Action

Lamentations 2:16 (#3)

בָּלַעַנּוּ

“We have swallowed {her} up”

The enemies are speaking of their destruction of Jerusalem as if they had swallowed her up like an animal consuming its prey. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [We have completely destroyed her]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 2:16 (#4)

מָצָאנוּ רְאִינוּ

“we have found it, we have seen it”

The expressions we have found and we have seen mean similar things. The enemies are using the two expressions together to express their satisfaction at finally witnessing the destruction they longed for. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express the emphasis with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [we have seen what we had been hoping to see]

See: Parallelism

Lamentations 2:17 (#1)

הַמִּתְחַלֵּל

“shown compassion”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of compassion, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [spared them]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 2:17 (#2)

הַרְרִים קָקְרוֹן צְהִיד

“he has lifted up the horn of your adversaries”

The writer is speaking of God increasing the power of the enemies as if he had lifted up their horn, since a horn represents the strength of a powerful animal. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [he has made your enemies powerful]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 2:18 (#1)

הוֹמַמַת בַּת־צִיּוֹן

“O wall of the daughter of Zion”

The writer speaks of the wall of the daughter of Zion as if it were a person who could weep. He says this because the wall lies in ruins and he urges it to mourn. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [Let the people of Zion cry out and weep]

See: Personification

Lamentations 2:18 (#2)

הוֹרִידִי כַנְנָחַל דְּמָעָהּ יוֹמָמָם וְלַיְלָה

“let tears flow down like a river day and night”

The writer uses a comparison to describe how abundant and continuous the weeping should be. He compares the flow of tears to a river, meaning the weeping should be constant and unceasing. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [Let your tears flow abundantly and continuously, day and night without stopping]

See: Simile

Lamentations 2:18 (#3)

יוֹמָמָם וְלַיְלָה

“day and night”

The writer is referring to all the time without stopping by naming two extremes, day and night. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [continually without stopping]

See: Merism

Lamentations 2:18 (#4)

בַּת־עֵינָךְ

“the daughter of your eye”

The expression the daughter of your eye was a common expression meaning the pupil of the eye. In this context it means that one should not let the eyes stop weeping. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could use a comparable expression or state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [the pupil of your eye] or [your eyes]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 2:19 (#1)

לְרֹאשׁ אֲשֶׁמְרוֹת

“at the beginning of the night watches”

The writer assumes that his readers will know that the night watches were the periods into which the night was divided for keeping guard. You could say this explicitly if that would be helpful to your readers. Alternate translation: [at the start of each period of the night]

See: Assumed Knowledge and Implicit Information

Lamentations 2:19 (#2)

שִׁפְכִי כַמַּיִם לְפָנֶיךָ נִכְחַ פְּנֵי אֲדֹנָי

“Pour out your heart like water before the face of the Lord”

The writer uses a comparison to describe complete, unreserved prayer. He compares pouring out the heart to pouring out water, meaning one should hold nothing back and empty oneself completely before God. If it would be helpful in your language, you could express the comparison plainly. See how you translated the similar expressions in [2:4] and [2:11]. Alternate translation: [Open your heart completely to the Lord]

See: Simile

Lamentations 2:19 (#3)

נִכְכַּח פָּנַי אֶדְנִי

“before the face of the Lord”

Here, the face of the Lord represents God’s presence. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [in the presence of the Lord]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 2:19 (#4)

שֹׂאֲאֵי אֶלְיֹי כַפְּיֶיךָ

“Lift up your hands to him”

Here, lift up your hands represents the act of praying and pleading with God. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [Pray earnestly to him]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 2:19 (#5)

בְּרֹאשׁ כָּל־חֻצּוֹת

“at the head of every street”

By the expression at the head of every street, the writer means that children are fainting from hunger everywhere. You could indicate this explicitly in your translation if that would be helpful to your readers. Alternate translation: [everywhere]

See: Assumed Knowledge and Implicit Information

Lamentations 2:20 (#1)

רֹאֵה יְהוָה וְהִבֵּיטָהּ

“See, O Yahweh, and look”

The imperatives See and look communicate a plea or request to God, not a command. If this does not communicate a polite request for your readers, you could use a form in your language that communicates a polite request. It may be helpful to add an expression such as “please” to make this clear. Alternate translation: [Please see this, Yahweh, and pay attention]

See: Imperatives — Other Uses

Lamentations 2:20 (#2)

לִמְנֵי עוֹלָלֹת כָּהָה אִם־תֹּאכְלֶנָּה וְשִׁשִּׁים פְּרִיָּם עַל־לֵי טַפְּחֵיהֶם
אִם־יִהְיֶה־רֶגַע בְּמִקְדָּשׁ אֶדְנִי כִּהְיֶה וְנִבְיָא

“To whom have you dealt thus? Should women eat their fruit, children of {their} nursing? Should priest and prophet be slain in the sanctuary of the Lord”

The writer uses rhetorical questions to express grief that God would allow his own people to suffer so terribly, to express outrage that women have been driven to eat their own children, and to express shock that religious leaders have been killed in the very place that was meant to be holy and safe. The expected answer to all these questions is “No!” If you would not use rhetorical questions for these purposes in your language, you could translate these as statements or exclamations. Alternate translation: [You have never dealt with anyone else this way! It is terrible that women are eating their own children! It is horrible that priests and prophets have been killed in the sanctuary of the Lord!]

See: Rhetorical Question

Lamentations 2:20 (#3)

פְּרִיָּם

“their fruit”

The expression their fruit was a common expression meaning their children or offspring. If this phrase does not have that meaning for your readers, use an equivalent expression or state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [their children]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 2:20 (#4)

כֹּהֵנִי וְנָבִיא

“priest and prophet”

The writer is referring to all of Israel’s religious leaders by naming two representative roles, priest and prophet. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [all their religious leaders]

See: Merism

Lamentations 2:21 (#1)

בְּנֵער וְזָקֵן

“Young and old”

The writer is referring to people of every age by naming two extremes, Young and old. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [People of all ages]

See: Merism

Lamentations 2:21 (#2)

בְּחֹלֵתַי וּבְחֹרְרִי

“My young women and my young men”

Jeremiah is referring to all the young people of the community by naming both groups, my young women and my young men. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [All the young among my people]

See: Merism

Lamentations 2:21 (#3)

נִפְלְלוּ בַּחֶרֶב

“have fallen by the sword”

The expression have fallen by the sword was a common expression meaning to be killed in battle. If this phrase does not have that meaning for your readers, you could use an equivalent expression or state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [have been killed in battle]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 2:21 (#4)

בְּיָוֶם אַפְּסֹדֶךָ

“on the day of your anger”

The writer is using the expression on the day of your anger to refer to the specific time when God executed judgment. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could use an equivalent expression or state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [when you were angry and judged us]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 2:21 (#5)

חֶמְלָתְךָ

“shown compassion”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of compassion, you could express the same idea in another way. See how you translated this phrase in [2:17]. Alternate translation: [spared anyone]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 2:22 (#1)

תִּקְרָאָה כִּי־יוֹם מוֹעֵד מְגֹרֵי מִסְבִּיב

“You have summoned, as on a day of an appointed festival, my terrors from all around”

The point of this comparison is that just as guests are invited to an appointed festival, so has God summoned numerous terrors from all around. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [You have invited terrors to attack me from all around, as if calling guests to a festival]

See: Simile

Lamentations 2:22 (#2)

מְגֹרֵי מִסְבִּיב

“my terrors from all around”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of terrors, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [enemies who terrify me from every side]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 2:22 (#3)

בְּיָוֶם אַף־יְהוָה

“on the day of the anger of Yahweh”

The writer is using the expression the day of the anger of Yahweh to refer to the time of divine judgment. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [when Yahweh was angry and executed his judgment]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 2:22 (#4)

פְּלִיט וְשָׂרִיד

“an escapee or a survivor”

The terms an escapee and a survivor mean similar things. The writer is using the two terms together to emphasize that absolutely no one got away. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express the emphasis with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [any one at all who escaped]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 2:22 (#5)

אֲשֶׁר־טָפַחְתִּי וְרַב־בֵּיתִי

“Those whom I carried and multiplied”

The terms carried and multiplied are paired to express the full cycle of motherhood, both bearing and nurturing children. The writer speaks as a mother figure who carried and raised these people. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express this with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [All those whom I lovingly reared]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 2:22 (#6)

אֵיבֹבִי כָלֵם

“my enemy has consumed them”

The writer is speaking of the enemy’s total destruction of the people as if the enemy had consumed them like food. Your language may have a comparable expression you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [my enemy has completely destroyed them]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations - Chapter 3 Introduction

Structure and Formatting

This individual lament uses a triple acrostic: each Hebrew letter governs three verses (66 total), far more elaborate than the book’s other poems. It moves from sustained suffering to hope in Yahweh’s faithfulness, then to communal lament.

Religious and Cultural Concepts in This Chapter

Covenant faithfulness

Verses 22–23 form the theological center of the book, declaring that Yahweh’s covenant faithfulness never ends and is renewed each morning. Translators should use a consistent term for this concept throughout Lamentations.

Lamentations 3:1 (#1)

עָנֵנִי

“affliction”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of affliction, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [how he has afflicted me]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:1 (#2)

רָאֵאָה עָנֵנִי

“seeing affliction”

The writer is speaking of the experience of affliction as if it were something he could see. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [experiencing affliction] or [suffering affliction]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:1 (#3)

בְּשִׁשְׁבַּט עֲבָרְתּוֹ

“his wrath”

Here the writer is speaking of God’s punishment as if it were a rod used to strike someone. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [by his angry punishment]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:1 (#4)

עֲבָרְתּוֹ

“his wrath”

The pronoun his refers to God. It may be helpful to clarify this for your readers. Alternate translation: [God’s wrath]

See: Pronouns — When to Use Them

Lamentations 3:1 (#5)

עֲבָרְתּוֹ

“his wrath”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of wrath, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [his wrathful punishment]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:2 (#1)

אוֹתִתִי נִהְיָה

“He drove me”

The pronoun He refers to God. It may be helpful to clarify this for your readers. Alternate translation: [God drove me]

See: Pronouns — When to Use Them

Lamentations 3:2 (#2)

הִתְשַׁוְּךָ וְלֹא-אִוִּיר

“and not light”

Here the writer is speaking of suffering as if it were darkness and of well-being as if it were light. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [in suffering and not relief]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:3 (#1)

יְהִפֹּךְ יָדָיו

“he turns his hand”

Here, his hand represents God’s power and action. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [he directs his power against me]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 3:3 (#2)

כָּל־הַיּוֹם

“the day”

The writer is saying all the day as a generalization for emphasis. If it would be clearer in your language, you could express the emphasis in a different way. Alternate translation: [continually]

See: Hyperbole

Lamentations 3:4 (#1)

בְּשָׁרִי וּבְעוֹרִי

“and my skin”

The terms my flesh and my skin mean similar things. The writer is using the two terms together for emphasis. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express the emphasis with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [my whole body]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 3:5 (#1)

בָּנָה עָלַי וַיִּקְרָא

“He built against me and surrounded {me”

Here the writer is speaking of God’s opposition as if God built siege works against him and surrounded him like an army besieging a city. Your language may have comparable expressions that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly.

Alternate translation: [He set himself against me and hemmed me in]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:5 (#2)

רָאשׁ וּתְלָאָה

“with} poison and hardship”

The terms poison and hardship mean similar things. The writer is using the two terms together for emphasis. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express the emphasis with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [with bitter suffering]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 3:6 (#1)

בְּמַחְשָׁכִים הוֹשִׁיבָנִי

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: הוֹשִׁיבָנִי בְּמַחְשָׁכִים”

Here the writer is speaking as if God had placed him in dark places, the realm where the forgotten dead dwell without hope. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [He has made me dwell in a place of utter despair]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:6 (#2)

כַּמִּתֵּי עוֹלָם

“of long ago”

The point of this comparison is that just as the dead of long ago are forgotten and have no hope, so the writer feels completely hopeless, as though no one remembers him. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [as if I were among those who have been dead and forgotten for a long time]

See: Simile

Lamentations 3:7 (#1)

אֶדְוָר בְּעִדְדִי וְלֹא אֵצְאָה

“and I cannot go out”

By He walled me in, and I cannot go out, the writer means that God caused him to be imprisoned so that he could not leave (see Jeremiah 37:15–16). You could indicate this explicitly in your translation if that would be helpful to your readers. Alternate translation: [He caused me to be confined so that I cannot escape]

See: Assumed Knowledge and Implicit Information

Lamentations 3:7 (#2)

הַכְּבִיד נִחְשָׁתִי

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: הַכְּבִיד נִחְשָׁתִי”

By he made my chains heavy, the writer means that God caused him to be bound in heavy chains (see Jeremiah 40:1). You could indicate this explicitly in your translation if that would be helpful to your readers. Alternate translation: [he caused me to be bound with heavy chains]

See: Assumed Knowledge and Implicit Information

Lamentations 3:8 (#1)

אֶזְעַק וְאֶשׁוּעַ

“I cry out”

The terms I cry out and call for help mean similar things. The writer is using the two terms together for emphasis. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express the emphasis with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [I desperately plead for help]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 3:8 (#2)

שָׁתַתֵּם תְּפִלָּתִי

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: שָׁתַתֵּם תְּפִלָּתִי”

Here the writer is speaking of his prayer as if it were a physical object that God shuts out or blocks. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [he refuses to hear my plea]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:9 (#1)

גִּדְדָר דְּרָכַי בְּגִזְזִית

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: גִּדְדָר דְּרָכַי בְּגִזְזִית”

Here the writer is speaking of his life direction as if it were a way or path, and of God blocking his progress as if God had walled up those ways with hewn stone. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [He has blocked every direction I try to go with solid obstacles]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:9 (#2)

נְחִיבְתִּי עֲנֶה

“my paths”

Here the writer is speaking of his life direction as if it were paths, and of God confusing his plans as if God had made those paths crooked. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [he has confused every direction I try to go]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:9 (#3)

גִּדְדָר דְּרָכַי בְּגִזְזִית נְחִיבְתִּי עֲנֶה

“my paths”

These two phrases mean basically the same thing. The second emphasizes the meaning of the first by repeating the same idea with different words. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could combine them and express the emphasis in another way. Alternate translation: [He has thoroughly blocked every path I try to take]

See: Parallelism

Lamentations 3:10 (#1)

דָּבַב אֲרֻב הוּאֵל לִי

“He {is & lying in ambush to me”

Here the writer is speaking of God as if he were a bear lying in ambush. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [He waits to attack me like a bear]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:10 (#2)

דָּבַב אֲרֻב הוּאֵל לִי אֲרִיָּה בְּמִסְתָּרָיו

“He {is & lying in ambush to me, a lion”

These two phrases mean basically the same thing. The second emphasizes the meaning of the first by repeating the same idea with different words. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could combine them and express the emphasis in another way. Alternate translation: [He lies in wait to attack me like a dangerous wild animal]

See: Parallelism

Lamentations 3:10 (#3)

אריה במסתרים

“a lion”

Here the writer is speaking of God as if he were a lion in hiding places. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [like a lion hiding and waiting to pounce]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:10 (#4)

אריה במסתרים

“a lion”

The writer is leaving out some of the words that in many languages a sentence would need in order to be complete. You can supply these words from the context if that would be clearer in your language. Alternate translation: [he is like a lion waiting to attack me in hiding places]

See: Ellipsis

Lamentations 3:11 (#1)

דרכי סורגר

“He turned aside my ways”

Here the writer is speaking of his life as if it were paths or ways that God turned aside. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [He diverted my course]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:12 (#1)

דגדג קשתו ויצא בלגי

“He bent his bow and set me up”

Here the writer is speaking of God as if he were an archer who bent his bow and aimed at him as a target. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [He prepared to attack me and made me]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:12 (#2)

כמטרה לחרץ

“like a target for the arrow”

The point of this comparison is that just as a target is set up to be struck by arrows, so God has set the writer up to receive his arrows of affliction. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [as something to be struck by the arrow]

See: Simile

Lamentations 3:13 (#1)

הביא אל בכליותי

“He caused to enter”

Here the writer is speaking of God’s affliction as if God were an archer whose arrows pierced his kidneys, representing deep inner pain. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [He shot deep into my body]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:13 (#2)

בגני אשפתי

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: בגני אשפתי”

The writer is speaking of the arrows as if they were sons of his quiver. If your language has a comparable expression, you can use it. If not, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [the arrows from his quiver]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:14 (#1)

הייתי שחקק לכל-עממי נגידתם כל-היום

“I became a laughingstock to all my people, their mocking song all the day”

These two phrases mean basically the same thing. The second emphasizes the meaning of the first by repeating the same idea with different words. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could combine them and express the emphasis in another way. Alternate translation: [I have become a constant source of ridicule to my people]

See: Parallelism

Lamentations 3:14 (#2)

הייתי שחקק לכל-עממי

“I became a laughingstock to all my people”

Here the writer is speaking of becoming an object of ridicule as if he literally became a laughingstock. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [I became an object of mockery to all my people]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:14 (#3)

לְכָל־עַמִּי

“to all my people”

The writer is saying all my people as a generalization for emphasis. If it would be clearer in your language, you could express the emphasis in a different way. Alternate translation: [to my people]

See: Hyperbole

Lamentations 3:15 (#1)

הַשְׂבִּיעַנִי בַמְרוֹרִים הָרַגְנִי לַעֲנָה

“he saturated me {with} wormwood”

The writer is speaking of God imposing bitter suffering on him as if God had literally filled him with bitter herbs and saturated him with wormwood. Your language may have comparable expressions that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [He has filled my life with bitter and overwhelming experiences]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:15 (#2)

הַשְׂבִּיעַנִי בַמְרוֹרִים הָרַגְנִי לַעֲנָה

“he saturated me {with} wormwood”

These two phrases mean basically the same thing. The second emphasizes the meaning of the first by repeating the same idea with different words. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could combine them and express the emphasis in another way. Alternate translation: [He has completely filled me with bitter suffering]

See: Parallelism

Lamentations 3:15 (#3)

לַעֲנָה

“with} wormwood”

Here, wormwood refers to a plant that tastes very bitter. If your readers would not be familiar with this plant, you could use the name of a bitter-tasting plant in your area, or you could use a more general term. Alternate translation: [with a bitter-tasting plant]

See: Translate Unknowns

Lamentations 3:16 (#1)

וַיִּגְרַס בְּחִצְיוֹ שְׁנִי

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: וַיִּגְרַס בְּחִצְיוֹ שְׁנִי”

Here the writer is speaking of his degrading humiliation as if God had literally made his teeth grind on gravel. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [He has humiliated me in a degrading way]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:16 (#2)

הַכְפִּישׁנִי בְּאַפֵּר

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: הַכְפִּישׁנִי בְּאַפֵּר”

The writer is speaking of being brought low in mourning and shame as if God had literally pressed him down in the ashes. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [he has brought me low in shame]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:17 (#1)

וַתִּזְנַח מִשְׁלֹום נַפְשִׁי

“And my soul was deprived of peace”

The phrase was deprived is a passive verbal form. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could express this in active form or in another way that is natural in your language. Alternate translation: [God deprived my soul of peace] or [God deprived me of peace]

See: Active or Passive

Lamentations 3:17 (#2)

מִשְׁלֹום

“of peace”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of peace, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [of anything peaceful]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:17 (#3)

טובה

“good”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of good, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [what is good]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:18 (#1)

ואמר אבד נצחתי ותוהלתתי מיהנה

“And I said, “My endurance has perished, and my hope from Yahweh”

If it would be helpful to your readers, you could translate this so that there is not a direct quotation but an indirect one. Alternate translation: [And I said that my endurance has perished, as has my hope from Yahweh]

See: Direct and Indirect Quotations

Lamentations 3:18 (#2)

אבד נצחתי ותוהלתתי מיהנה

“My endurance has perished, and my hope from Yahweh”

Here the writer is speaking of his endurance and hope as if they were living things that could perish. Your language may have comparable expressions that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [My ability to endure is gone and my expectation that Yahweh would help me]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:18 (#3)

נצחתי ותוהלתתי

“My endurance & and my hope”

If your language does not use abstract nouns for the ideas of endurance and hope, you could express the same ideas in other ways. Alternate translation: [My ability to endure ... and my reason to hope]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:19 (#1)

זכר-עניי ומרודי

“Remember my affliction and my wandering”

The writer is using the imperative form Remember to make a request to God, but it communicates a polite request rather than a command. If the imperative does not communicate a polite request for your readers, then use a form in your language that communicates a polite request. It may be helpful to add an expression such as “please” to make this clear. Alternate translation: [Please remember my affliction and my wandering]

See: Imperatives — Other Uses

Lamentations 3:19 (#2)

זכר-עניי ומרודי

“Remember my affliction and my wandering”

If your language does not use abstract nouns for the ideas of affliction and wandering, you could express the same ideas in other ways. Alternate translation: [Remember how I have been afflicted and how I have wandered]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:19 (#3)

עניי ומרודי

“my affliction and my wandering”

The terms my affliction and my wandering mean similar things. The writer is using the two terms together for emphasis. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express the emphasis with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [my great distress]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 3:19 (#4)

לעננה וראש

“the wormwood and the poison”

The terms the wormwood and the poison mean similar things. The writer again is using the two terms together for emphasis and here also you could express the emphasis with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [the overwhelming bitterness]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 3:19 (#5)

לעננה וראש

“the wormwood and the poison”

Here the writer speaks of his bitter suffering as if it were wormwood and poison that he was forced to taste. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [the overwhelming bitterness of my experience]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:20 (#1)

זָכֹר תִּזְכֹּר

“Remembering, it remembers”

The writer is repeating forms of the verb remembering, it remembers in order to intensify his expression of the idea that it conveys. If your language can repeat words for intensification, it would be appropriate to do that here in your translation. If not, your language may have another way of expressing the intensification. Alternate translation: [It certainly remembers]

See: Reduplication

Lamentations 3:20 (#2)

תִּזְכֹּר

“it remembers”

The subject of the verb translated it remembers is ambiguous. This likely refers to the writer’s soul continuing to remember the suffering described in the previous verse. It may be helpful to clarify this for your readers. Alternate translation: [my soul remembers] or [I remember]

See: Pronouns — When to Use Them

Lamentations 3:20 (#3)

וְתִשָּׁחוּ עָלַי נַפְשִׁי

“and my soul bows down upon me”

The writer speaks of his soul as if it were a person who bows down. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [and I am bowed down]

See: Personification

Lamentations 3:21 (#1)

זֶאת אֲשֶׁר אֶשְׁיָב אֵלַי לִבִּי

“This & to”

Here, This refers forward to what the writer is about to say, not back to what he has just described. Alternate translation: [This is what I recall]

See: Assumed Knowledge and Implicit Information

Lamentations 3:21 (#2)

אֲשֶׁר אֶשְׁיָב אֵלַי לִבִּי

“to”

Here the heart represents where the writer’s thoughts and emotions exist. He is speaking of recalling something as if he were physically bringing it back to his heart. You may have a comparable expression in your language, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [I recall in my mind]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:21 (#3)

עַל־כֵּן אֶחְיֶה

“therefore I will hope”

The word translated as therefore indicates that what follows is a result of what the writer has just brought back to mind. Use a word or phrase that makes this relationship clear. Alternate translation: [and so I will hope]

See: Connect — Reason-and-Result Relationship

Lamentations 3:22 (#1)

כִּי לֹא־תִתְּמָנוּ

“for we have not perished”

Many ancient manuscripts read for we have not been consumed, with the writer and the people as the subject. The ULT follows that reading. Other ancient manuscripts read “his steadfast love has not ceased,” with the steadfast love of Yahweh as the subject. If a translation of the Bible exists in your region, you may wish to use the reading that it uses. If a translation of the Bible does not exist in your region, you may wish to use the reading of the ULT.

See: Textual Variants

Lamentations 3:22 (#2)

חֶסֶדְךָ יְהוָה & רַחֲמֶיךָ

“The covenant faithfulness of Yahweh & his compassions”

If your language does not use abstract nouns for the ideas of covenant faithfulness and compassions, you could express the same ideas in other ways. Alternate translation: [Because Yahweh is faithful to his covenant ... his compassionate actions continue and]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:23 (#1)

חֲדָשִׁים לְבַקְרִים

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: לְדַשִּׁימָם לְבָקָרִים”

The pronoun They refers to “the compassionate actions” of Yahweh. It may be helpful to clarify this for your readers. Alternate translation: [His compassion renews every morning]

See: Pronouns — When to Use Them

Lamentations 3:23 (#2)

רַבְּבָה אֱמוּנָתְךָ

“your faithfulness”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of faithfulness, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [you are always faithful]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:24 (#1)

חִלְקִי יְהוָה אֶמְרָה נַפְשִׁי

“Yahweh {is} my portion,” my soul said”

If it would be helpful to your readers, you could translate this so that there is not a direct quotation but an indirect one. Alternate translation: [I realized that Yahweh is all I need]

See: Direct and Indirect Quotations

Lamentations 3:24 (#2)

חִלְקִי יְהוָה

“Yahweh {is} my portion”

Here the writer is speaking of Yahweh as if he were an inherited portion of land. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [Yahweh is like my inheritance]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:24 (#3)

אֶמְרָה נַפְשִׁי

“my soul said”

Here, my soul represents the writer himself from the perspective of his inner being. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [I said to myself]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 3:24 (#4)

עַל-כֵּן אוֹחִיל לוֹ

“therefore I will hope in him”

The word therefore here indicates that what follows is a result of Yahweh being his portion. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use a word or phrase that makes this relationship clear. Alternate translation: [and so I will hope in him]

See: Connect — Reason-and-Result Relationship

Lamentations 3:25 (#1)

לְנַפֵּשׁ תִּדְרֹשְׁנִי

“to the soul {that}”

Here, the soul represents the person who seeks God. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [to the person who seeks him]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 3:26 (#1)

לְתִשׁוּעָה

“for the salvation of”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of salvation, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [for the saving act of]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:27 (#1)

לְגִבּוֹר

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: לְגִבּוֹר”

Here the masculine term man has a generic sense that includes both men and women. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could use language in your translation that is clearly inclusive of both men and women. Alternate translation: [for anyone]

See: When Masculine Words Include Women

Lamentations 3:27 (#2)

כִּי־יִשָּׂא עָלַי בְּעוֹרִי

“a yoke”

Here the writer is speaking of discipline and suffering as if they were a yoke placed on a person’s shoulders. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [if he endures discipline in his youth]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:27 (#3)

כִּי־יִשָּׁא עַל בְּנֵוְרָיו

“a yoke”

Here, that he bears a yoke in his youth introduces a possible condition. It is good for a man only if this happens. Use a natural form in your language for introducing a condition that could happen. Alternate translation: [when he bears a yoke in his youth]

See: Connect — Hypothetical Conditions

Lamentations 3:28 (#1)

יִשָּׁב בְּדָד וְיִדָּם

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: יִשָּׁב בְּדָד וְיִדָּם”

The writer is using the third-person imperative form Let him sit to give instruction about what a person should do. See the discussion in the introduction to this book about “let” and “may” and follow the decision of your team here and elsewhere in this lament. If it would be helpful in your language, you could express this with a different form that communicates instruction or exhortation. Alternate translation: [He should sit alone and be silent] or [I desire that he sit alone and be silent]

See: Third-Person Imperatives

Lamentations 3:28 (#2)

נָטַל עָלָיו

“he has laid [it] upon him”

The pronoun he in he has laid refers to God, while the pronoun him refers to the suffering person. It may be helpful to clarify this for your readers. Alternate translation: [God has laid it upon him]

See: Pronouns — When to Use Them

Lamentations 3:29 (#1)

יִתֵּן בְּעָפָר פִּיָּהּ

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: יִתֵּן בְּעָפָר פִּיָּהּ”

In the writer’s culture, putting one’s mouth in the dust was a symbolic action that signified extreme humility and submission before God. If it would be helpful in your language, you could explain the significance of this action in the text of your translation or in a footnote. Alternate translation: [Let him humble himself completely before God]

See: Symbolic Action

Lamentations 3:29 (#2)

תִּקְוָה

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: תִּקְוָה”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of hope, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [something to hope for]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:30 (#1)

יִתֵּן לְמַכָּהוּ לְלִחִי

“Let him give {his} cheek to the one striking him”

In the writer’s culture, giving one’s cheek to the one striking him was a symbolic action that signified patient acceptance of suffering and willingness to endure insult without retaliation. If it would be helpful in your language, you could explain the significance of this action in the text of your translation or in a footnote. Alternate translation: [Let him patiently accept the blows of the one who strikes him]

See: Symbolic Action

Lamentations 3:30 (#2)

בְּחִרְפָּה

“with reproach”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of reproach, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [with insults]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:31 (#1)

כִּי לֹא יִזְנֶנָּה לְעוֹלָלָם אֲדָנִי

“the Lord will not reject forever”

The word For here indicates that what follows is the reason for the exhortation in the preceding verses. Use a word or phrase in your language that makes it clear that what follows is the reason for what came before. Alternate translation: [The reason is that the Lord will not reject forever]

See: Connect — Reason-and-Result Relationship

Lamentations 3:32 (#1)

כִּי אִם־הוֹגֵגָה וְרַחֵם

“though he causes grief, he will have compassion”

The words For though introduce a contrast between what God does temporarily and what he will do ultimately. In your translation, indicate this contrast in a way that is natural in your language. Alternate translation: [Even though he causes grief, he will still have compassion]

See: Connect — Contrast Relationship

Lamentations 3:32 (#2)

אִם־הוֹגֵגָה וְרַחֵם כְּרַחֵב חֶסֶדוֹ

“though he causes grief, he will have compassion & his covenant faithfulness”

If your language does not use abstract nouns for the ideas of grief, compassion, and covenant faithfulness, you could express the same ideas in other ways. Alternate translation: [even though he grieves people, he will show them that he is compassionate because he is faithful to his covenant]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:33 (#1)

לֹא עֲנֶהָ מִלְּבָבוֹ

“he does not afflict”

Here the heart represents God’s true desire and will. The writer is saying that God does not afflict people because he desires to do so. You may have a comparable expression in your language, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [he does not willingly afflict]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:33 (#2)

בְּנֵי־אִישׁ

“the sons of man”

Although the writer uses the masculine term the sons of man, he means this to apply to people in general, both men and women. If it would be helpful in your language, you could include language that is clearly inclusive of both men and women. Alternate translation: [people]

See: When Masculine Words Include Women

Lamentations 3:34 (#1)

לִדְכָאֵל תַּתַּחַת רַגְלָיו כָּל אֲסֻרֵי אֶרֶץ

“his feet & the prisoners of {the} earth”

The infinitive phrases in this verse and the following verses list actions that precede the main statement in verse 36. If it would be helpful in your language, you could restructure this so that the relationship between these actions and the main statement is clear. Alternate translation: [When anyone crushes under his feet all the prisoners of the earth]

See: Information Structure

Lamentations 3:34 (#2)

תַּתַּחַת רַגְלָיו

“his feet”

Here, under his feet represents dominion and oppressive power. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [under his authority]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 3:35 (#1)

מִשְׁפָּט

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: מִשְׁפָּט”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of justice, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [the right to be judged justly]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:35 (#2)

נִגְדַּד פָּנָיו עָלָיוֹן

“before & the Most High”

Here, before the face of the Most High represents being in the presence of the Most High. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [in the presence of the Most High]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 3:36 (#1)

לְעִנּוֹת אָדָם בְּרִיבּוֹ

“to pervert a man in his dispute”

The writer is speaking of acting unjustly toward someone as if it were physically twisting or distorting him, using the same image as “turn aside” in the previous verse. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [to deal unjustly with a man in his legal case]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:36 (#2)

אֲדַגְנִי לֹלֵא רָאָה

“the Lord does not see it”

This could mean: (1) that the Lord does not regard with approval the wrong actions described in verses 34–36. Alternate translation: [the Lord does not approve] or (2) that the author is using the question form for emphasis. Alternate translation: [does the Lord not see it?] or [the Lord certainly sees it!]

See: Assumed Knowledge and Implicit Information

Lamentations 3:37 (#1)

מִמִּי יָזָה אָמַרְרָ וּתְהִי אֲדַגְנִי לֹלֵא צָוָה

“Who {is} this {who} spoke & Did} the Lord not”

The writer is using these questions to emphasize that no one can speak something into existence apart from God. If it would be helpful in your language, you could express these questions as statements here and in verses 38–39. Alternate translation: [No one can speak and make it happen unless God has ordained it.]

See: Rhetorical Question

Lamentations 3:38 (#1)

מִפִּי עֲלִיוֹן

“the Most High”

Here, the mouth of the Most High represents the decrees and commands of God. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [From the decree of the Most High]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 3:38 (#2)

הַרְעָעוֹת וְהַטּוֹב

“the evil things and the good”

Jeremiah is referring to everything that happens by naming two extremes, the evil things and the good. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [all things, whether bad or good]

See: Merism

Lamentations 3:39 (#1)

אֲדָדִים הָיִי גִגְרָר

“a living man & a man”

Although the writer uses the masculine terms a living man and a man, he means these to apply to people in general, both men and women. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use language in your translation that is clearly inclusive of both men and women. Alternate translation: [a living person ... a person]

See: When Masculine Words Include Women

Lamentations 3:39 (#2)

עַל־חַטָּאִיו

“about his sins”

By about his sins, the writer means “about the punishment he receives for his sins.” You could indicate this explicitly in your translation if that would be helpful to your readers. Alternate translation: [about his punishment for sin]

See: Assumed Knowledge and Implicit Information

Lamentations 3:40 (#1)

נִחַפְשָׁשָׁה דְרָכֵינוּ וְנִבְחַקְנָהּ

“our ways and examine {them}”

Here the writer is speaking of examining conduct and behavior as if it were ways or paths that a person could search. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [Let us carefully examine our conduct]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:40 (#2)

נִחַפְשָׁשָׁה דְרָכֵינוּ

“our ways”

Here the pronouns us and our do not include God, whom the community is addressing. The writer is speaking on behalf of himself and the people but not God, so use the exclusive form of the word if your language marks that distinction.

See: Exclusive and Inclusive ‘We’

Lamentations 3:40 (#3)

נחפֿשֿשָׁה דְרַכֵּינוּ וְנִחְקֹרָהּ

“our ways and examine {them}”

The terms search and examine mean similar things. Jeremiah is using the two terms together for emphasis. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express the emphasis with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [Let us carefully examine our conduct]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 3:41 (#1)

נִשְׁאָא לִבֵּבֵנוּ

“our hearts”

Here the heart represents the inner being and affections. The writer is speaking of directing his heart toward God as if it were something he could lift up. You may have a comparable expression in your language, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [Let us direct our innermost being in prayer]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:41 (#2)

לִבֵּבֵנוּ אֶל־כַּפָּיִם

“our hearts with”

Here the pronouns our do not include God, whom the community is addressing. The writer is speaking on behalf of himself and the people. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this distinction.

See: Exclusive and Inclusive ‘We’

Lamentations 3:41 (#3)

אֶל־כַּפָּיִם

“with”

Here, hands represents the gesture of prayer. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [with our hands raised in prayer]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 3:42 (#1)

בְּהִנּוּ פִשְׁעֵנוּ

“We, we”

The writer is stating the pronoun We separately for emphasis, to highlight the community’s guilt. If a speaker of your language would use an explicit pronoun for the same purpose, you may want to use that construction in your translation. If not, your language may have other ways of showing the meaning here. Alternate translation: [It is we who have transgressed]

See: Pronouns — When to Use Them

Lamentations 3:42 (#2)

פִּשְׁעֵנוּ וּמִרְיֵנוּ

“and rebelled”

The terms transgressed and rebelled mean similar things. The writer is using the two terms together for emphasis. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express the emphasis with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [have sinned greatly against you]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 3:43 (#1)

סִכַּתָּה בְּאַףִּי

“You covered {yourself} in nose”

Here the writer is speaking of God’s nose as if it were a garment that God covered himself with. The nose refers to anger. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [You were completely consumed by anger]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:43 (#2)

לֹא הִמָּלֵתָ

“you did not show pity”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of pity, you could express the same idea in other ways. Alternate translation: [you did not show that you pitied us]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:44 (#1)

סִכַּתָּה בְּעָנָן לְלֹד

“You covered yourself in a cloud”

Here the writer is speaking of a barrier to communication with God as if God had covered himself in a cloud. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [You made yourself unreachable]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:44 (#2)

מַעֲבֹר תְּפִלָּה

“from a prayer passing through”

The phrase from a prayer passing through indicates the result of God covering himself in a cloud. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use a word or phrase that makes it clear that this is a result of God covering himself in a cloud. Alternate translation: [with the result that no prayer reached you]

See: Connect — Reason-and-Result Relationship

Lamentations 3:44 (#3)

מַעֲבֹר תְּפִלָּה

“from a prayer passing through”

Here the writer is speaking of prayer as if it were a physical object that could be blocked from traveling through a barrier. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [so that you would not hear any prayer]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:45 (#1)

סָחַרְי וּמֵאֲזֹס תִּשְׁמַמְנוּ

“Offscouring and refuse”

In this verse the object Offscouring and refuse comes before the subject and verb you make for emphasis. If it would be more natural in your language, you could restructure this to put the subject and verb first. Alternate translation: [You make us offscouring and refuse]

See: Information Structure

Lamentations 3:45 (#2)

סָחַרְי וּמֵאֲזֹס תִּשְׁמַמְנוּ

“Offscouring and refuse”

Here the writer is speaking of the people as if they were offscouring and refuse, that is, filth and garbage that others discard. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [You have made us despised and rejected]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:45 (#3)

סָחַרְי וּמֵאֲזֹס

“Offscouring and refuse”

The terms Offscouring and refuse mean similar things. The writer is using the two terms together for emphasis. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express the emphasis with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [Worthless waste]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 3:46 (#1)

פָּצְצוּ עָלֵינוּ פִּיהֶם

“against us”

The expression opened their mouth against us was a common expression meaning “spoke against us with hostility.” If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [spoke against us with hostility]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 3:47 (#1)

פָּתַחַד וּפְפֻחַת הַהֵיזָה לָנוּ הַשִּׁשְׁאָת וְהַשְּׂבָר

“and the pit have come to us”

These two phrases mean basically the same thing. The second emphasizes the meaning of the first by repeating the same idea with different words. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could combine them and express the emphasis in another way. Alternate translation: [We have experienced overwhelming terror and utter ruin]

See: Parallelism

Lamentations 3:47 (#2)

פָּתַחַד וּפְפֻחַת הַהֵיזָה לָנוּ הַשִּׁשְׁאָת וְהַשְּׂבָר

“and the pit have come to us”

If your language does not use abstract nouns for the ideas of Terror, desolation, and destruction, you could express the same ideas in other ways. Alternate translation: [Terrifying things have come to us, what makes us desolate and what destroys us]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:47 (#3)

פָּתַחַד וּפְפֻחַת & הַשִּׁשְׁאָת וְהַשְּׂבָר

“and the pit”

The terms Terror and the pit mean similar things. Also, the terms the desolation and the destruction mean similar things. The writer is using two terms together for emphasis. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express the emphasis with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [Overwhelming danger ... utter ruin]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 3:47 (#4)

הַשִּׁשָּׁאָה וְהַשֹּׁכֵר

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: הַשִּׁשָּׁאָה וְהַשֹּׁכֵר”

The writer is leaving out some of the words that in many languages a sentence would need in order to be complete. You can supply these words from the context if that would be clearer in your language. Alternate translation: [desolation and destruction have come to us] or [utter ruin has come to us]

See: Ellipsis

Lamentations 3:48 (#1)

פְּלִגֵּי־מַמִּימִם תִּרְדַּד עֵינַי

“water & my eye”

The writer says Streams of water go down from my eye as an extreme statement for emphasis. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use a different way to express the emphasis. Alternate translation: [Many tears flow from my eye]

See: Hyperbole

Lamentations 3:48 (#2)

פְּלִגֵּי־מַמִּימִם תִּרְדַּד עֵינַי

“water & my eye”

Here, my eye represents the writer himself as the one who is weeping. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [I weep profusely]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 3:48 (#3)

עַל־שֹׁשֶׁבֶר בֵּת־עַמִּי

“over”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of destruction, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [because my people have been destroyed]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:48 (#4)

בֵּת־עַמִּי

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: בֵּת־עַמִּי”

Here the writer is speaking of his people as if they were a daughter. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [my beloved people]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:49 (#1)

עֵינַי נִגְרָה וְלֹא תִדְמָה

“My eye & and does not cease”

The writer speaks of his eye as if it were a person who could pour out tears on its own. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [I pour out tears and do not cease]

See: Personification

Lamentations 3:49 (#2)

וְלֹא תִדְמָה מֵאַיִן הִפְגִּית

“and does not cease, without stopping”

The writer says does not cease, without stopping as an overstatement for emphasis. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use a different way to express the emphasis. Alternate translation: [does not cease for any relief]

See: Hyperbole

Lamentations 3:50 (#1)

עַד־יִשְׁקָקֶיךָ

“until he looks down”

The word until marks the endpoint of the writer’s weeping. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use a word or phrase that makes this temporal relationship clear. Alternate translation: [until the time when Yahweh looks down]

See: Connect — Sequential Time Relationship

Lamentations 3:51 (#1)

עֵינַי עוֹלֵלָה לְנַפְשִׁי

“My eye brings grief”

The writer is using the term eye to mean what he sees. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [What I see brings grief to my soul]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 3:51 (#2)

לִנְפִשְׁשִׁי

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: לִנְפִשְׁשִׁי”

Here, my soul represents the writer himself from the perspective of his inner being. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [to me]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 3:51 (#3)

בָּנֹת עִירִי

“my city”

Here the writer is speaking of the women of his city as the daughters of my city. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [the women of my city]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:52 (#1)

צָדוּד צִדְדוֹנִי

“Hunting, they hunted me”

The writer is repeating the verb Hunting before the main verb for emphasis, to show the relentless and determined nature of the pursuit. If your language can repeat words for intensification, it would be appropriate to do so here. If not, your language may have a comparable way to express emphasis. Alternate translation: [They hunted me relentlessly]

See: Reduplication

Lamentations 3:52 (#2)

צָדוּד צִדְדוֹנִי כַצֶּפֶר

“Hunting, they hunted me”

The point of this comparison is that just as a bird is helpless and easily caught by hunters, so the writer’s enemies pursued him relentlessly. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [I was helpless before their pursuit]

See: Simile

Lamentations 3:53 (#1)

צָמְתָנוּ בְּבוֹרֵר חַיִּי

“They silenced & in the pit”

By They silenced my life in the pit, the writer means that his enemies threw him into a cistern intending to kill him (see Jeremiah 38:6). You could indicate this explicitly in your translation if that would be helpful to your readers. Alternate translation: [They threw me into a cistern to kill me]

See: Assumed Knowledge and Implicit Information

Lamentations 3:54 (#1)

צָפוּרֵי מַיִם עַל־רֹאשִׁי

“Waters flowed over my head”

By Waters flowed over my head, the writer means that water in the cistern rose up around him and he was in danger of drowning (see Jeremiah 38:6). You could indicate this explicitly in your translation if that would be helpful to your readers. Alternate translation: [The water in the cistern rose over my head]

See: Assumed Knowledge and Implicit Information

Lamentations 3:54 (#2)

נִגְזַרְתִּי

“I am cut off”

The expression I am cut off is a passive verbal form. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state this with an active form or in another way that is natural in your language. Alternate translation: [They have cut me off]

See: Active or Passive

Lamentations 3:54 (#3)

נִגְזַרְתִּי

“I am cut off”

If it would be helpful to your readers, you could translate this so that there is not a direct quotation but an indirect one. Alternate translation: [that I was cut off]

See: Direct and Indirect Quotations

Lamentations 3:54 (#4)

נִגְזַרְתִּי

“I am cut off”

The expression I am cut off was a common expression meaning I am about to die or I am separated from the living. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [I am about to die]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 3:55 (#1)

קָרָאתִי שְׁמֶךָ

“I called on your name”

Here, your name represents God himself and his character. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [I called on you]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 3:55 (#2)

מִבְּבוֹר תְּהוֹמֹתַי

“from the pit of the depths”

By the pit of the depths, Jeremiah means the deepest part of the cistern where his enemies had thrown him (see Jeremiah 38:6). You could indicate this explicitly in your translation if that would be helpful to your readers. Alternate translation: [from the deepest part of the cistern]

See: Assumed Knowledge and Implicit Information

Lamentations 3:56 (#1)

קוֹלִי שִׁמְעָה

“my voice”

Here, my voice represents the words the writer spoke in prayer. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [You heard my prayer]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 3:56 (#2)

אַל-תַּעֲלֹם אֶזְנוֹךָ

“do not & your ear”

Here, your ear represents God’s hearing and attention. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [do not refuse to listen]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 3:56 (#3)

אַל-תַּעֲלֹם אֶזְנוֹךָ לְרוּחֹתַי

“do not & your ear to my relief”

The writer is using the imperative form do not hide to make a request to God rather than to give a command. If it would be helpful in your language, you could express this with a form that communicates a request. Alternate translation: [please do not refuse to hear and come to my aid, and listen]

See: Imperatives — Other Uses

Lamentations 3:56 (#4)

לְרוּחֹתַי לְשׁוּעָתִי

“to my relief”

The terms my relief and my cry for help mean similar things. The writer is using the two terms together for emphasis. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express the emphasis with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [to my desperate plea]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 3:56 (#5)

לְרוּחֹתַי לְשׁוּעָתִי

“to my relief”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of relief, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [when I ask you to relieve my pain and cry out for you to help me]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:57 (#1)

אַל-תִּירָא

“Do not fear”

If it would be helpful to your readers, you could translate this so that there is not a direct quotation but an indirect one. Alternate translation: [not to be afraid]

See: Direct and Indirect Quotations

Lamentations 3:58 (#1)

רִבְכָּה אֶלְנִי רִיבְכִי נַפְשִׁי

“Lord & the cases of”

Here the writer is speaking of God defending him as if God were a legal advocate who pleaded his cases in a courtroom. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [Lord, you were my legal advocate]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 3:58 (#2)

רִיבִי נִפְשִׁי

“the cases of”

Here, my soul represents the writer himself. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [my case]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 3:59 (#1)

עֲוֹנֹתַי

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: עֲוֹנֹתַי”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of my wrong, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [how they have wronged me]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:59 (#2)

שִׁפְטָה מִשְׁפָּטִי

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: שִׁפְטָה מִשְׁפָּטִי”

The writer is using the imperative form judge to make a request to God rather than to give a command. If it would be helpful in your language, you could express this with a different form that communicates a polite request. Alternate translation: [please judge my case]

See: Imperatives — Other Uses

Lamentations 3:60 (#1)

כָּל־נִקְמָתָם כָּל־מַחֲשַׁבְתָּם

“their vengeance”

If your language does not use abstract nouns for the ideas of vengeance and plans, you could express the same ideas in other ways. Alternate translation: [all the ways they have tried to harm me and how they scheme against me]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:61 (#1)

הֲרַפְתָּם יְהוָה כָּל־מַחֲשַׁבְתָּם

“Yahweh”

If your language does not use abstract nouns for the ideas of reproach and plans, you could express the same ideas in other ways. Alternate translation: [how they reproach me and everything they plan against me]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:62 (#1)

שִׁפְתַּי קָמִי

“those rising”

Here, the lips of those rising against me represents the hostile speech of the writer’s enemies. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [the words of those who oppose]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 3:63 (#1)

שִׁבְתָּם וְקִיּוּמָם הַבִּיטָה

“and their rising”

The writer is using the imperative form Look to make a polite request to God rather than to give a command. If it would be helpful in your language, you could express this with a different form that communicates a polite request. Alternate translation: [Please observe their sitting and their rising]

See: Imperatives — Other Uses

Lamentations 3:63 (#2)

שִׁבְתָּם וְקִיּוּמָם

“and their rising”

The writer is referring to everything his enemies do by naming two major components, their sitting and their rising. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [everything they do]

See: Merism

Lamentations 3:64 (#1)

גִּמְוִל

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: גִּמְוִל”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of recompense, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [what they deserve]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 3:64 (#2)

בְּמַעֲשֵׂיהֶם יְדִיָּהֶם

“their hands”

Here, their hands represents the actions and deeds of the writer’s enemies. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [according to their evil actions]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 3:65 (#1)

מִגִּגְת־לֵבָי

“heart”

The expression a covering of heart was a common expression meaning spiritual stubbornness or obstinacy of mind. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use a comparable expression or state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [stubborn minds]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 3:66 (#1)

בְּאַרְוִי

“in nose”

The writer is using the phrase in nose as a common expression of the culture to mean in anger. If this phrase does not have that meaning for your readers, use a comparable expression from your language that does have that meaning, or state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [in your fury] or [because you are angry]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 3:66 (#2)

מִתַּתְּחַת שָׁמַיִם יְהוָה

“from under the heavens of Yahweh”

Here the writer is speaking of the realm of the living as being under the heavens of Yahweh. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [from the face of the earth]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations - Chapter 4 Introduction

Structure and Formatting

Lamentations 4 is a 22-verse acrostic poem, with each verse beginning with a successive letter of the Hebrew alphabet. The poem moves from vivid images of degradation — tarnished gold, starving children, cannibalism — to the fall of Jerusalem’s prophets, priests, and king, closing with a warning to Edom and a word of hope that Zion’s punishment is complete.

Religious and Cultural Concepts in This Chapter

The anointed of Yahweh

Verse 20 calls the king “the anointed of Yahweh” and “the breath of our nostrils.” This royal language expresses the deep trust the people placed in the king as God’s appointed ruler. Translators should use a term for “anointed” consistent with how it is used elsewhere, since the same concept applies to priests and, ultimately, to the Messiah.

Daughter of Edom and daughter of Zion

The chapter closes by addressing “daughter of Edom” and “daughter of Zion” as if they were women. This is a common Hebrew way of personifying a city or nation.

Translation Issues in This Chapter

Iniquity as sin or punishment

In verses 6 and 22, the word “iniquity” can mean either the sin itself or the punishment for sin. Translators should choose one reading and apply it consistently within each verse, since the two clauses in each verse are parallel.

Lamentations 4:1 (#1)

אֵיכָה־נָא

“How”

The word How introduces an exclamation of sorrow which expresses strong feelings of shock and grief at the way the people of Zion are now treated. This is poetic language and begins the lament for the destruction of Jerusalem and its people. If there is an equivalent word or phrase in your language that you can use in your translation, you could use it here and in verse 2.

See: Poetry

Lamentations 4:1 (#2)

יֹעֲצֵם זָהָב יִשְׁנָא הַכֶּכֶּתֶם הַטָּטִיב

“the gold is tarnished; {people} have changed the good fine gold”

Here the writer is speaking as if the people of Jerusalem were gold that has lost its luster and fine gold that has been altered. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [the people have lost their value; the most honored people have changed]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 4:1 (#3)

תִּשְׁתַּפֵּץ כְּנֶהֱרַ אֲבִנֵי־קִלְעֹדָשׁ

“The stones of holiness are poured out”

Here the writer is speaking as if the people of the city were The stones of holiness and liquid that has been poured out and scattered. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [The holy stones lie scattered] or [The people lie scattered]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 4:1 (#4)

בְּרֹאשׁ כָּל־חֻצוֹת

“at the head of every street”

The writer is using at the head of every street as a common expression of the culture to mean at the beginning or top of every street. If this phrase does not have that meaning for your readers, you could use a comparable expression from your language that does have that meaning, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [on every street corner] or [at the top of every street]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 4:2 (#1)

בְּנֵי צִיּוֹן הַיְקָרִים הַמְּסֻלָּאִים בַּפֶּזֶז

“The precious sons of Zion, weighed against fine gold”

Here the writer is speaking as if the people of Jerusalem were precious metal that could be weighed against fine gold. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [The precious sons of Zion, as valuable as fine gold]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 4:2 (#2)

הַמְּסֻלָּאִים בַּפֶּזֶז

“weighed against fine gold”

The expression weighed against fine gold is a passive verbal form. If it would be unnatural to use that form, you could express the idea in active form or in another way that is natural in your language. Alternate translation: [whose value equaled fine gold]

See: Active or Passive

Lamentations 4:2 (#3)

אִיכָכָה נִחְשְׁבוּ לַנְּבִלִי־חֹתָרָשׁ

“how they are regarded as jars of clay”

The point of this comparison is that just as jars of clay are cheap and easily broken, so the sons of Zion are now treated as worthless. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [how people regard them as worthless, like jars of clay]

See: Simile

Lamentations 4:3 (#1)

בַּת־עַמִּי לֹא־זָרָה

“But} the daughter of my people {has} become cruel”

The writer is speaking of the daughter of my people as if the people group were one woman. If it would be helpful in your language, you could state the meaning plainly here and in verse 10. Alternate translation: [But my people have become cruel]

See: Personification

Lamentations 4:3 (#2)

כִּי עֲנִים בַּמִּדְבָּר

“like ostriches in the wilderness”

The point of this comparison is that just as ostriches in the wilderness abandon their eggs and neglect their young, so the people have become cruel to their children. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [like ostriches in the wilderness that abandon their young]

See: Simile

Lamentations 4:4 (#1)

הַכֶּןֹּז

“the roof of his mouth”

Here, the writer is speaking of the top of the infant’s mouth as if it were a roof. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [the top of his mouth] or [his palate]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 4:5 (#1)

הָאֶמְנִים עָלָיו תּוֹלָעַ

“The ones reared on scarlet”

Here, scarlet represents expensive dyed clothing. The expression The ones reared on scarlet is a passive verbal form. If it would be unnatural to use that form, you could express the idea in active form or in another way that is natural in your language. Alternate translation: [Those whose parents raised them in fine clothes]

See: Active or Passive

Lamentations 4:6 (#1)

וַיִּגְדֹּל עוֹנָן בֶּת-עַמְמִי מִחַטָּאת סֹדֶם

Here, iniquity could represent: (1) the sin itself, meaning the sinfulness of the people is worse than the sinfulness of Sodom. Alternate translation: [the wickedness of the daughter of my people is greater than the wickedness of Sodom] or (2) the punishment for sin, meaning God has punished the people more severely than he punished Sodom. The UST follows this reading. Alternate translation: [the punishment of the daughter of my people is greater than the punishment of Sodom]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 4:6 (#2)

וַיִּגְדֹּל עוֹנָן בֶּת-עַמְמִי מִחַטָּאת סֹדֶם

“And the iniquity of the daughter of my people is greater than the sin of Sodom”

If your language does not use abstract nouns for the ideas of iniquity and sin, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [And the way the daughter of my people has acted wickedly is worse than the way Sodom sinned]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 4:6 (#3)

וְלֹא-הִתְחִילוּ כַּבָּה יָדֵיהֶם

“and hands did not tremble for her”

This could mean: (1) no one expressed grief for Sodom, that is, no one wrung their hands in anguish over its destruction. Alternate translation: [and no one grieved for her] or (2) no human hands were involved in its destruction because God destroyed it suddenly. Alternate translation: [and no hands helped her]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 4:7 (#1)

נְזִירֵיהָ

“Her Nazirites”

This could mean: (1) Nazirites refers to people who had taken a special vow of dedication to God, as described in Numbers 6:1–21. Their pure appearance would reflect their consecrated life. Alternate translation: [Her consecrated ones] or (2) the word refers more generally to nobles, leaders, or people who were set apart by their high position. The UST follows this reading. Alternate translation: [Her nobles]

See: Translate Unknowns

Lamentations 4:7 (#2)

וְכָבוֹ & מִשְׁשָׁלָג צָחָהּ מִחֶלֶב

“were purer & they were whiter than milk”

The point of this comparison is that just as snow and milk are bright and clean, so the Nazirites had a pure appearance. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [were as clean looking as snow; their appearance was as bright as milk]

See: Simile

Lamentations 4:7 (#3)

אֲדָמָו עֲצָמָם מִפְּנִינִים סַפְּפִיר גִּזְרָתָם

“Their bones were more ruddy”

The point of this comparison is that just as corals have a rich red color and sapphire is very precious, so the Nazirites’ bodies had a healthy, ruddy complexion and fine form. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [Their complexion was as healthy-looking as coral; their form was as beautiful as sapphire]

See: Simile

Lamentations 4:8 (#1)

חֲשֵׁךְ מִשְׁחֹרָרִי

“is darker than soot”

The point of this comparison is that just as soot is very dark, so the appearance of the people has become extremely dark because of starvation and suffering. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [is extremely dark]

See: Simile

Lamentations 4:8 (#2)

יִבְבֵּשׁ הַיָּדָה כְּעֵץ

“it has become dry as wood”

The point of this comparison is that just as wood is dry and lifeless, so the skin of the starving people has become dried out. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [it has become dry and lifeless like a piece of wood]

See: Simile

Lamentations 4:9 (#1)

הַלֵּלִי־הַחֶרֶב

“the slain of the sword”

Here, the slain of the sword represents those who died in battle. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [those who died by the sword in battle]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 4:9 (#2)

שָׁשָׂהֶם יִזְזֹבוּ מִדְּקָרָרִים מִתְּנוּבָת שָׂדֵי

“for they waste away, pierced for lack of the fruits of the field”

If it would be more natural in your language, you could reverse the order of these phrases, since the second phrase gives the reason for the result that the first phrase describes. Alternate translation: [because there was no food from the fields, they wasted away, pierced by hunger]

See: Connect — Reason-and-Result Relationship

Lamentations 4:10 (#1)

יָדָי נְשִׁימָם רַחֲמֵי־נִיּוֹת

“The hands of compassionate”

Here, The hands of compassionate women represents the women themselves and their actions. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [Compassionate women themselves]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 4:10 (#2)

הָיָיו לְבָרוֹתָת לְלֵמֹ

“they became food for them”

The pronoun they refers to the children, while the pronoun them refers to the women.

See: Pronouns — When to Use Them

Lamentations 4:11 (#1)

הָרָחוֹן אֶפְפוּ

“the burning of his nose”

The writer is using the burning of his nose as a common expression of the culture to mean that Yahweh is angry. If this phrase does not have that meaning for your readers, you could use a comparable expression from your language that does have that meaning, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [his fierce anger] or [his burning anger]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 4:12 (#1)

בְּשַׁעֲרֵי יְרוּשָׁלַם

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: בְּשַׁעֲרֵי יְרוּשָׁלַם”

Here, the gates of Jerusalem represents the city itself and its defenses. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [the city of Jerusalem]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 4:13 (#1)

מִחֲטָטָאֵת נְבִיאָאִיהָ עֹנְוֹת כַּהֲנֶיהָ

“Because of the sins of her prophets, the iniquities of her priests”

These two phrases mean basically the same thing. The second emphasizes the meaning of the first by repeating the same idea with different words. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could combine them and express the emphasis in another way. The pronoun her in the phrases her prophets and her priests refers to Jerusalem. Alternate translation: [Because of the great wickedness of her religious leaders]

See: Parallelism

Lamentations 4:13 (#2)

הַשֹּׁפְכִים & דָּמָם צָדִיקִים

“the ones pouring out the blood of the righteous”

Here, pouring out the blood of the righteous represents killing innocent people. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [killing righteous people]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 4:14 (#1)

קָעוּ עֲוִרֵיהֶם בְּחוּצוֹת

“They wandered blind”

Here the writer is speaking as if the prophets and priests were physically blind. He means that they had no moral or spiritual discernment, and now after Jerusalem’s destruction they wander helplessly through the streets. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [They wandered through the streets without direction, unable to see what they had done]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 4:14 (#2)

נִגְזָלוּ לִי בְּדָמָם

“they were defiled”

Here, blood represents the guilt of having murdered innocent people. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [they were guilty of shedding innocent blood] or [the blood of their victims defiled them]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 4:15 (#1)

סָוְרוּ טַמְאָה קָרְאוּ לָלֵמוֹ סָוְרוּ סָוְרוּ אֶל-תִּגְלָעוּ

“Turn aside! Unclean!” they called to them. “Turn aside! Turn aside! Do not touch”

If it would be more natural in your language, you could express these as indirect quotations. The verse contains direct quotations of what people shouted at the defiled priests and prophets. The first pronoun they refers to the people of the city, while the pronoun them refers to the priests and prophets. Alternate translation: [People shouted at them to turn aside because they were unclean, and told them to go away and not to touch anyone]

See: Direct and Indirect Quotations

Lamentations 4:15 (#2)

אָמְרוּ בְּגוֹיִם לֹא יוֹסִיפוּ לָגוֹר

“They said among the nations, “They shall not continue to sojourn”

If it would be more natural in your language, you could express this as an indirect quotation. The first They refers to the people of the nations while the second They refers to the priests and prophets. Alternate translation: [They said among the nations that those priests and prophets could not continue to live there]

See: Direct and Indirect Quotations

Lamentations 4:16 (#1)

פָּגַי יְהוָה הִלְקָנוּם

“Yahweh”

Here, The face of Yahweh represents Yahweh’s presence and active attention. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [Yahweh himself scattered them]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 4:16 (#2)

לֹא יוֹסִיף לְהִבְטֵטֵם

“he will not continue to”

By saying Yahweh will not continue to look at them, the writer means that Yahweh will no longer watch over or care for the priests and prophets he has scattered. You could indicate this explicitly in your translation if that would be helpful to your readers. The pronoun he refers to Yahweh, while the pronoun them refers to the priests and prophets. Alternate translation: [he will no longer watch over them]

See: Assumed Knowledge and Implicit Information

Lamentations 4:16 (#3)

פָּגַי כֹּהֲנֵיהֶם לֹא נִשְׁטְאוּ

“the priests they did not”

The writer is using The face of the priests they did not lift up as a common expression of the culture to mean they did not show respect to the priests. If this phrase does not have that meaning for your readers, you could use a comparable expression from your language that does have that meaning, or you could state the meaning plainly. The pronoun they in the phrases they did not lift up and they did not show grace refers to the people of the nations. Alternate translation: [They did not show respect to the priests] or [They did not honor the priests]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 4:16 (#4)

לֹא הִנִּיחוּ

“they did not show grace”

The writer is using show grace as a common expression meaning to show kindness or mercy. If this phrase does not have that meaning for your readers, you could use a comparable expression from your language that does have that meaning, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [they did not show them any mercy]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 4:17 (#1)

עֵינֵינוּ

“Our eyes”

In this verse, the writer shifts from speaking about the people of Jerusalem in the third person (as in verses 1-16) to speaking in the first-person plural, identifying himself with them. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could note this shift or make it natural in your language.

See: Pronouns — When to Use Them

Lamentations 4:17 (#2)

עוֹדֵינוּ תִּכְלֶלְנָה עֵינֵינוּ אֶל

“Our eyes still ended {looking} for”

Here the writer is using Our eyes to represent the act of watching and hoping. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [We still grew weary looking for]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 4:17 (#3)

עֲזָרָתֵנוּ הִהְיָה

“our help—a vapor”

Here the writer is speaking of the help they hoped for as if it were a vapor, something that appears but quickly vanishes. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [our help was worthless] or [our help amounted to nothing]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 4:18 (#1)

צָדָדוּ צְעֵדֵינוּ

“They hunted our steps”

Here the writer is speaking as if the enemies were hunters and the people of Judah were prey that they hunted and our steps represents the people’s movements and daily activities. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [They tracked our every movement]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 4:18 (#2)

קִרְבָּה קִצְצֵינוּ מֵלֵאאוּ יָמֵינוּ כִּי־בָּא קִצְצֵנוּ

“Our end drew near; our days are full, for our end had come”

Jeremiah uses three phrases that build on each other to express the same idea with increasing intensity. Our end represents the time of their destruction, and our days represents the time they had left. The first phrase says it was approaching, the second that their time had run out, and the third confirms it had arrived. If your language has a natural way to build this kind of repetition, use it. If not, you could combine these and express the emphasis in another way. Alternate translation: [The time of our destruction was at hand—our days had run out, for our end had finally come]

See: Poetry

Lamentations 4:19 (#1)

עַל־הַהָרִים & בַּמִּדְבָּר

“On the mountains”

The writer is referring to all places by naming two extremes, On the mountains and in the wilderness.

If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [Everywhere, whether on the mountains ... in the wilderness]

See: Merism

Lamentations 4:20 (#1)

רָחֵם אֶפְיָנוּ

“The breath of”

Here the writer is speaking as if the king were The breath of our nostrils, that is, as essential to the people’s lives as breathing. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [The one who was essential to our life]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 4:20 (#2)

נָלַכְדָּ בַשְּׁחִיתוֹתָם

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: בַּשְּׁחִיתוֹתָם”

Here the writer is speaking as if the king were an animal captured in their pits. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [fell into the traps they set] or [the enemies captured him in their pits]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 4:20 (#3)

אָשָׁר אָמַרְנוּ בְּצִלּוֹ נְהִיָּה בְּגוֹיִם

“we said & we will live among the nations”

If it would be more natural in your language, you could express this as an indirect quotation. Alternate translation: [of whom we said that we would live under his protection among the nations]

See: Direct and Indirect Quotations

Lamentations 4:20 (#4)

בְּצִלּוֹ נְהִיָּה

“we will live”

Here the writer is speaking as if the king’s protection were a shadow that shelters from the heat. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [Under his protection we will live]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 4:21 (#1)

שְׂשִׁישִׁי וְשִׁמְחֵי בְּתִּי אֶדְדוֹם יִשְׁשֶׁבֶת בְּאַרְרִין עַוְיָן

“Edom & Uz”

The writer is speaking to the people of Edom, who are not present. He is doing this to communicate to the people listening to him that he feels very strongly about the judgment that will come on Edom as well. If it would be helpful in your language, you could translate these words as if he were speaking directly to his own people about Edom. Alternate translation: [The people of Edom who live in the land of Uz may rejoice and be glad now]

See: Apostrophe

Lamentations 4:21 (#2)

שְׂשִׁישִׁי וְשִׁמְחֵי בְּתִי אֶדְדוֹם

“Edom”

The writer actually means to communicate the opposite of the literal meaning of what he is saying here. He is not genuinely urging Edom to celebrate but is sarcastically warning that judgment is coming for them as well. If a speaker of your language would not do that, you could translate the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [You may be celebrating now, people of Edom]

See: Irony

Lamentations 4:21 (#3)

גַּם־עֲלֵי־יָדְךָ תַּעֲבֹר־כַּלּוֹס

“to you the cup”

Here the writer is speaking as if God’s judgment were a cup of wine being passed to Edom to drink. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [Yahweh will also judge you]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 4:21 (#4)

תִּשְׁכַּרְיָי וְתִתְעָרִי

“and will make yourself naked”

Here the writer is speaking as if experiencing God’s judgment were becoming drunk and the resulting public humiliation were making yourself naked. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [you will stagger under his judgment and will be exposed in your shame]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 4:22 (#1)

תָּם-עֲוֹנֶיךָ בַּת-צִיּוֹן

“Your iniquity & Zion”

As in 4:6, the word iniquity here could represent either the sin itself or the punishment for it. In this context, the sense is most likely that Zion’s punishment is complete—Yahweh has finished disciplining his people and will not send them into exile again. Alternate translation: [Your punishment is complete, daughter of Zion] or [You have finished serving your sentence, people of Zion]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 4:22 (#2)

שָׁקַד עֲוֹנֶיךָ

“your iniquity”

The writer is using He will visit your iniquity as a common expression of the culture to mean that Yahweh will punish Edom for their wrongdoing. If this phrase does not have that meaning for your readers, you could use a comparable expression from your language that does have that meaning, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [He will punish you for your iniquity] or [He will hold you accountable for your wrongdoing]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 4:22 (#3)

גִּלְגָּל עַל-חַטָּאתֶיךָ

“your”

Here the writer is speaking as if Edom’s sins were hidden things that Yahweh will uncover for all to see. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [he will expose your sins for all to see]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations - Chapter 5 Introduction

Structure and Formatting

This chapter is a communal prayer to Yahweh, cataloging the people’s suffering (vv. 1–18), affirming God’s eternal throne (v. 19), and closing with petitions and rhetorical questions (vv. 20–22). Unlike chapters 1–4, it is not an acrostic, though it retains 22 verses matching the Hebrew alphabet.

Religious and Cultural Concepts in This Chapter

Inherited guilt

The community confesses that their fathers sinned and died, yet the current generation bears their iniquity (v. 7), reflecting communal covenant accountability.

Translation Issues in This Chapter

Recurring synonymous parallelism

Many verses pair synonymous lines, requiring translators to preserve the parallel structure while keeping each line distinct.

Lamentations 5:1 (#1)

זְכֹר יְהוָה לִמַּה הִתְהַיָּה לָנוּ הַבַּיִת וּרְאֵאֵה אֶת-חֲרָפָתָנוּ

“Remember, Yahweh, what has happened to us; look and see our reproach”

This is an imperative, but it communicates a polite request rather than a command. If the imperative does not communicate a polite request for your readers, then use a form in your language that communicates a polite request. It may be helpful to add an expression such as “please” to make this clear. Alternate translation: [Please remember, Yahweh, what has happened to us; please look and see our reproach]

See: Imperatives — Other Uses

Lamentations 5:1 (#2)

הַבַּיִת וּרְאֵאֵה

“look and see”

The terms look and see mean similar things. The writer is using the two terms together for emphasis. If it would be clearer for your readers, you could express the emphasis with a single phrase. Alternate translation: [look carefully at]

See: Doublet

Lamentations 5:2 (#1)

נִחַלְתִּנוּ וְנִהְיִינוּ כְּזִרְיָם בְּתַתִּינוּ לְנִכְרִים

“Our inheritance has been turned over to strangers & to foreigners”

These two clauses mean basically the same thing. The second emphasizes the meaning of the first by repeating the same idea with different words. If it would be helpful to your readers, you could combine them and express the emphasis in another way. Alternate translation: [Our inheritance and our houses have been taken from us and given to people who are not from our land]

See: Parallelism

Lamentations 5:3 (#1)

אִמֵּנוּ כְּאַלְמָנוֹת

“our mothers {are} like widows”

The point of this comparison is that just as widows are without husbands to care for them, so are our mothers without anyone to support them. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [our mothers have no one to support them]

See: Simile

Lamentations 5:4 (#1)

מִיָּמֵינוּ בְּכֶסֶף שָׁתִּינּוּ

“Our water”

If it would be more natural in your language, you could change the order of the words so that the subject comes before the object. Alternate translation: [We drink our water for silver]

See: Information Structure

Lamentations 5:5 (#1)

עַל צַוָּארֵינוּ נִרְדָּףנוּ

“on our necks”

The writer is using pursued on our necks as a common expression of the culture to mean “our enemies chase us relentlessly and are close behind us.” If this phrase does not have that meaning for your readers, you could use a comparable expression from your language that does have that meaning, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [We are chased relentlessly by our enemies]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 5:5 (#2)

לֹא

“and rest is not”

If your language does not use an abstract noun for the idea of rest, you could express the same idea in another way. Alternate translation: [and we are not allowed to rest]

See: Abstract Nouns

Lamentations 5:6 (#1)

מִצְרַיִם נָתַתְנוּ יָד

“We have given a hand to Egypt”

The writer is using given a hand as a common expression of the culture to mean “submitted” or “surrendered.” If this phrase does not have that meaning for your readers, you could use a comparable expression from your language that does have that meaning, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [We have submitted to Egypt]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 5:6 (#2)

אֲשׁוּר

“to} Assyria”

The implication is that the people also submitted to Assyria, just as they submitted to Egypt. You could include this information if that would be helpful to your readers. Alternate translation: [to Assyria also]

See: Assumed Knowledge and Implicit Information

Lamentations 5:6 (#3)

מִצְרַיִם נָתַתְנוּ יָד אֲשׁוּר לְשִׁבְעָה לֶחֶם

“We have given a hand to Egypt, {to} Assyria, to be satisfied {with} bread”

Here, to be satisfied with bread marks getting food as the goal or purpose of submitting to Egypt and Assyria. Use a connector in your language that makes it clear that this is the purpose.

See: Connect — Goal (Purpose) Relationship

Lamentations 5:7 (#1)

אֵינָם

“they are no more”

The writer is referring to death in a polite way by using the phrase they are no more. Depending on what is helpful for your readers, you could use a polite way of referring to this in your language, or you could state this plainly. Alternate translation: [they have died]

See: Euphemism

Lamentations 5:7 (#2)

אנחנו עוֹנֵתֵיהֶם סָבְלָנוּ

“and we, we bear their iniquities”

The pronoun we refers to the current generation of the people of Jerusalem, in contrast with their fathers who sinned and died. It may be helpful to clarify this for your readers. Alternate translation: [and we, the current generation, bear their iniquities]

See: Pronouns — When to Use Them

Lamentations 5:7 (#3)

אנחנו עוֹנֵתֵיהֶם סָבְלָנוּ

“and we, we bear their iniquities”

The writer is speaking as if the consequences of sin were a physical burden that people bear. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [and we, we suffer the consequences of what they did wrong]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 5:8 (#1)

מִיָּדָם

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: מִיָּדָם”

Here, their hand represents “their control.” If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [from their control]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 5:9 (#1)

מִפָּנֵי

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: מִפָּנֵי”

The writer is using from the face of as a common expression of the culture to mean “because of.” If this phrase does not have that meaning for your readers, you could use a comparable expression from your language that does have that meaning, or you could state the meaning plainly here and in verse 10. Alternate translation: [because of]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 5:9 (#2)

הַתָּרֵב הַמְדַּבֵּר

“the sword of”

Here, the sword of the wilderness represents “the violent dangers in the wilderness.” If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [the violent dangers of the wilderness]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 5:10 (#1)

עוֹרֵנוֹ כְּתַנְנוּר נִכְמָמְרוּ

“Our skin grows hot”

The point of this comparison is that just as an oven is extremely hot, so the people’s skin is burning with intense heat from fever. If it would be helpful in your language, you could make this point explicitly. Alternate translation: [Our skin burns as hot as an oven]

See: Simile

Lamentations 5:11 (#1)

נָשִׁים & עֲנָוִי

“They violate women”

The writer is referring to sexual assault in a polite way by using the word violate. Depending on what is helpful for your readers, you could use a polite way of referring to this in your language, or you could state this plainly. Alternate translation: [They sexually assault women]

See: Euphemism

Lamentations 5:12 (#1)

פָּנֵי זְקֵנִים

“elders”

Here, the faces of elders represents the elders themselves. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [the elders themselves]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 5:14 (#1)

זְקֵנִים מִשְׁשֹׁעַר שְׂבָחוּ

“Elders”

Here, the gate represents the place where civic leaders gathered to make decisions and administer justice. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [Elders have ceased from making decisions]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 5:14 (#2)

זְקֵנֵיהֶם מִשְׁשָׁעַר שְׁכַבְתּוֹ בַּחוּרִים

“Elders”

The writer is referring to all of the people by naming two major components, Elders and young men. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [Everyone has stopped gathering at the gates, all the people have withdrawn]

See: Merism

Lamentations 5:15 (#1)

לִבִּי

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: לִבִּי”

The writer is speaking of the people’s emotions as if they were located in the heart. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [our emotions]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 5:16 (#1)

נִפְלְהָה עֲטֹרַת רָאשֵׁינוּ

“The crown of & has fallen”

The writer is speaking of the people’s honor and dignity as if it were a crown that could fall from their head. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [We have lost our honor and dignity]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 5:16 (#2)

אֵי-יָגַע לָנוּ

“Woe now to us”

The writer is using a phrase that expresses a strong feeling of grief and despair. There may be an equivalent word or phrase in your language that you can use in your translation to convey this feeling. Alternate translation: [We are now in great misery]

See: Exclamations

Lamentations 5:17 (#1)

הָיָה דָוָהָ לִבִּי

“has become sick”

The writer is speaking of the people’s grief as if their heart had become physically sick. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [our heart is filled with grief]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 5:19 (#1)

לְעוֹלָם תִּשְׁשָׁב

“forever”

The writer uses the word sit to speak of Yahweh’s rule as if he were a king on a throne. Your language may have a comparable expression that you can use in your translation, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [reign forever]

See: Metaphor

Lamentations 5:19 (#2)

כִּסְאֲדָךְ

“QUOTE_NOT_FOUND: כִּסְאֲדָךְ”

Here, your throne represents “your royal authority.” If it would be helpful in your language, you could use an equivalent expression or plain language. Alternate translation: [your royal authority is]

See: Metonymy

Lamentations 5:19 (#3)

לְדֹר וָדֹר

“to generation and generation”

The writer is using to generation and generation as a common expression of the culture to mean “throughout every generation” or “forever.” If this phrase does not have that meaning for your readers, you could use a comparable expression from your language that does have that meaning, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [throughout every generation]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 5:20 (#1)

לְלֵמָּה לְנִצָּחַח תִּשְׁכַּחֲנוּ תַעֲזֹבֵנוּ לְאַחֲרֵי יָמִים

“forever & for the length of days”

The writer is using the question form to express anguish over feeling abandoned by God. If a speaker of your language would not use the question form for that purpose, you could translate these as statements or as exclamations. Alternate translation: [Surely you have forgotten us forever, you have forsaken us for so long]

See: Rhetorical Question

Lamentations 5:20 (#2)

לְאַחֲרֵי יָמִים

“for the length of days”

The writer is using for the length of days as a common expression of the culture to mean “for a long time.” If this phrase does not have that meaning for your readers, you could use a comparable expression from your language that does have that meaning, or you could state the meaning plainly. Alternate translation: [for a very long time]

See: Idiom

Lamentations 5:21 (#1)

הַשִּׁיבֵנוּ יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵינוּ וְנָשׁוּבָה חֲדָשׁ יִמְמֵינוּ כְּקֶדֶם

These phrases are imperatives, but they communicate polite requests rather than commands. If the imperative does not communicate a polite request for your readers, then use a form in your language that communicates a polite request. It may be helpful to add an expression such as “please” to make this clear. Alternate translation: [Please bring us back to yourself, Yahweh, and please let us return; please make our days as they were in times past]

See: Imperatives — Other Uses

Lamentations 5:22 (#1)

כִּי אַתָּה מְאַסֵּת מְאֹד מֵאַסְתִּתְּנוּ

“For have you rejecting”

The writer is using the question form to express fear and anguish about the possibility that God has completely rejected his people. If a speaker of your language would not use the question form for that purpose, you could translate these as statements or as exclamations. Alternate translation: [For you have completely rejected us! You have been angry against us beyond measure!]

See: Rhetorical Question

Lamentations 5:22 (#2)

מֵאַסֵּת מְאֹד מֵאַסְתִּתְּנוּ

“have you rejecting”

The writer is repeating forms of the verb rejected in order to intensify his expression of the idea that it conveys. If your language can repeat words for intensification, it would be appropriate to do that here in your translation. If not, your language may have another way of expressing the intensification. Alternate translation: [have you rejected, yes, rejected us]

See: Reduplication

Lamentations 5:22 (#3)

עַד-מֶאֱדָ

“beyond measure”

The writer says beyond measure as an extreme statement for emphasis. If it would be helpful in your language, you could use a different way to express the emphasis. Alternate translation: [so greatly]

See: Hyperbole
